How Are Our Graduates Viewed in the Marketplace?

“ACBSP accreditation truly elevates the level of on-line learning and the value of the degree in the eyes of human resource professionals.”
— David L. Moody, Ph.D., SPHR, FACHE
Vice President/CHRO
Salina Regional Health Center, Salina, KS

“I have sent several members of my executive team to get their MBA/DBA/PhD degrees from an ACBSP-accredited university that will prepare them for the one global economy in which we live.”
— Yacov Geva, Chairman & CEO
Card Guard AG, Neuhausen am Rheinfall Switzerland

ACBSP Accreditation: How does it help produce graduates who are ready to function in a global marketplace?

High Performance Employees
- Graduates are educated in programs that include the critical areas for business study. Common Professional Components (CPCs) ensure immediate contributions to your business.
- Graduates grounded in these critical areas of business study are more able to solve multi-disciplinary problems and be effective decision makers.

Practical Business Skills
- Accredited business schools follow core values defined by the Baldrige National Quality Program. All institutions must report on their process of continuous improvement.
- Student-centered learning approaches are required that provide graduates with practical problem-solving skills, leadership abilities, data analysis, environmental awareness, and good citizenship.

Strong Business Relationships
- ACBSP accreditation requires classroom learning to be measured and analyzed.
- Business schools must conduct a self-study to demonstrate how specific standards, including strategic planning, leadership, stakeholder focus, and measurement of student learning, are being met.

Global Network
- ACBSP actively recruits schools from around the world to create a global education network. This network of member schools promotes cultural enrichment for schools of all sizes.
- Businesses in local communities are viewed as major stakeholders in a collaborative learning process.

Critical Areas For Business Study
- Graduates from ACBSP-accredited colleges and universities have been required to complete some if not all coursework for critical areas of business study, including:
  - Financial Accounting
  - Managerial Accounting
  - Marketing Management
  - Financial Concepts and Markets
  - Strategic Management and Leadership
  - Managerial Economics
  - Operations Management
  - Quantitative Analysis and Decision Making
  - Information Technology
  - Organizational Behavior
  - Human Resource Management

In What Ways Can ACBSP Accreditation Create Value For You?
- Hiring New Employees
- Tuition Reimbursement
- Involvement in Business Advisory Boards
- Support for Your Charitable Contributions
- Creating Internship Opportunities

The Accreditation Council for Business Schools and Programs (ACBSP) was founded in 1988 to create an accreditation process designed to fit the needs of business programs by focusing on teaching and learning that occurs in the classroom. ACBSP currently has more than 828 members in 44 countries. Visit our Web site for more information: www.valueofacbsp.org
