Course Description:

Smart water is the combination of physical and digital infrastructure to provide greater insight into the operation and performance of the system, leading to better decision-making for management of the distribution and collection systems. The digital infrastructure essential to deploying a smart system includes three primary components coupled with several supporting components. To achieve its strategic goals of optimally managing infrastructure and enhancing operating excellence, DC Water is transforming its water and wastewater infrastructure to a "smart water system" under the Smart Water Program. The goals of this program will ultimately improve the operational robustness of the distribution and collection systems.
