

As a candidate for the American College of Radiation Oncology Board of Chancellors, my vision is to continue my dedicated service to the College through increased advocacy for the field during difficult financial times, leading collaborative endeavors across organizations, and renewing educational initiatives.

I currently serve as an assistant professor of radiation oncology in the Department of Radiation Oncology at the University of Texas MD Anderson Cancer Center. As an ACRO member, it has been my honor to serve the College as the ACRO New Practitioner Chair and as a member of the ACRO Board of Chancellors. In addition, I currently serve as an engaged member of the Education Committee and Finance/Development Committee. My previous service to the College includes my service as Resident Committee Chair during my years in training where I expanded mentorship and educational endeavors for student and resident members, and increased membership engagement for trainees.

During my time as New Practitioner Chair and Board of Chancellor representative, I have actively grown our new practitioner membership, built new educational programs for our membership, and increased industry partner collaboration for renewed annual meeting support of our New Practitioner Program. In addition, I have held/currently hold a number of leadership positions in organizations including the American College of Radiology, American Society of Therapeutic Radiation Oncology, NRG Oncology, and the Bladder Cancer Advocacy Network. I believe collaboration across institutions will help to strength our position as a leading voice for radiation oncology and put forward a unified stance in support of our great field.

My overarching vision is to continue the strong advocacy work of the American College of Radiation Oncology and build upon opportunities for future engagement in order to advocate for our membership and champion the field of radiation oncology.
