Member Spotlight
Alyssa Reid
AIA Las Vegas Allied Member
I Am A Member Of The American Institute Of Architects (AIA) Because... I genuinely believe in what this organization represents – uncompromising integrity and ethics, quality work, and professionalism. I am honored to be a part of this organization as an Allied Member.

Ever since I was a child, I’ve always been quite aware of my inherent need to give and to help – any way, anyone who needs it – I would extend myself to them. I always thought I would “grow up” to be a veterinarian, teacher, social worker, etc. After graduating from ASU with a BS in Applied Psychology, I accidentally found myself in the construction industry...and what a happy surprise this turned out to be! With a decade of experience under my belt now, I have been able to hold relationship-based roles and also spent several years in Preconstruction. My last role was with a GC in Phoenix, and I found that while I enjoyed the job itself, I could also make a significant impact in my community. Through this industry, I have been able to give years of my life to serving others – by spending time with students at career fairs, teaching “Construction Days” at schools, packing food for the homeless, fostering dogs, fundraising to support all sorts of causes, leading HUNDREDS of my fellow colleagues in providing gifts to children without families during the holidays, and so much more. I see massive potential for good everywhere, and this industry is a vessel for me to find these opportunities and recruit others to help along the way. There are some BIG hearts in our industry!

What is your favorite piece of architecture? Why? Hands down – La Sagrada Familia in Barcelona, Spain. I have been in awe of the late Architect Antoni Gaudi for over 20 years now and had the privilege of visiting this incredible basilica in 2019 before the pandemic hit. He was not only a genius, but also demonstrated great kindness in his community. For example, Gaudi recognized the large number of families that had to move to work on this great build; he believed that educating these children was crucial and quickly built a school just for them, and filled it with professors, books, and all the other essentials they needed.

How can AIA lead reform and innovation? I believe that those of us in this organization and in this industry have a unique opportunity to be at the forefront of the water shortage issue, as we can proactively make transformations and include products in our designs that will help build a brighter future for all. No matter what your view is on climate change, we can no longer deny the fact that clean water scarcity is an issue, which continues to quietly gain momentum every single day. This is precisely why I choose to represent Sloan, which is a manufacturer that “gets it”; they offer many water-saving and energy-efficient products, plant 2.5 trees for every carbon neutral product installed on a job and are the first general goods manufacturer to achieve certification from the Alliance for Water Stewardship (AWS) Standard for their headquarters in Franklin Park, IL. This is how we are going to get better and make the “bathtub ring” phenomenon at Lake Mead a thing of the past!

Where will you be in 20 years? I will be right here in Las Vegas! I hope that I will have made a positive impact and that I will be the go-to person for professionals who need an honest voice and recommendations on their projects and designs. It would be a bonus to have both of my step-sons working with my husband and I, and serving the Las Vegas/Henderson community alongside us!

What is the most important thing you’ve learned? Learn something new every single day, and try to find one good thing in every single person you meet. The world can be harsh, but hope will remain when we can see the good all around us.
Welcome to the month of May. Hopefully, we will have time to catch our breath from April’s marathon of events!

We kicked the month off with a First Friday event at Art Houz which was graciously sponsored by Coverings. We then hosted the very successful 48th annual AIA Las Vegas Golf Tournament hosted at TPC Summerlin and sponsored by CORE Construction. Congratulations again to both winning teams! The same week all three Nevada chapters participated in AIA’s Grassroots where we got to represent our membership when speaking to the office of Senator Cortez Masto and Congresswoman Titus about the Yes In My Back Yard (YIMBY) act and the Democracy in Design. Allied Member Committee didn’t skip a beat either when hosting a membership social at Grand Canyon Development Partners. We are very thankful for Kayleigh Hasshaw, Allied Member Director, and Sam Nicholson for setting this event up. It was great to see so many smiling faces while also helping two non-profit organizations. The day after we got to hear from the Southern Nevada Water Authority for a virtual meeting focused on the future of water in Southern Nevada. We are very thankful for all the hosts and sponsors that made this past month possible.

May will usher in one of the most important events in our calendar this year. On May 18, 2022 the Las Vegas Chapter will host the 2022 High School Design Awards hosted by the AIA Las Vegas Education Outreach Committee and the UNLV Architecture Library. This year’s participants will showcase their talents and works of achievement. If you attended the Allied Membership event at Grand Canyon Development Partners, you would have had an opportunity to interact with quite a few of the high school students involved in the competition. I had to privilege of speaking with three students and all three asked the same question: is it worth it to become an Architect? My response was if you are passionate about architecture and the built environment, you will never work a day in your life!

As an architect, we have a professional duty to help provide a successful pathway for these students, both in high school and college. We can offer our support in numerous ways: mentorship, internships, lectures, classroom/studio visit, office tours, and construction site tours to list a few. One of the easiest ways is to attend the Highschool Design Awards celebration, show your support, and share your wisdom and knowledge with the future of our profession. As the profession continues to evolve and our practices rely more and more on technology, these students will be leading the way.

Regards,

John Sawdon, AIA

The 48th Annual AIA Las Vegas Golf Tournament was held at TPC Summerlin on Monday, April 11th, 2022. It was a very windy day and we got done just in time before the dust storm arrived. Phew! That was close! Still, a good time was had by all. Our tournament was the last event held at TPC before they shut the whole course down for a year to complete a redesign and renovation. We are counting on being one of the first to play on the new course next year! AIA Las Vegas President John Sawdon, AIA and Executive Director Carlos Fernandez served as MCs for the Event. Our Allied Director, Kayleigh Hasshaw served as our hostess.

We had some excellent career fairs this school year and we were well received and provided a lot of hand-outs and shared personal experiences with interested students. The high schools that had tentatively planned on career fairs for April were cancelled. We hope to do more of these events next year and have discovered that joining forces with UNLV at these events is a real plus which we hope to duplicate next year.

Our committee is a resource for communicating with CCSD teachers and we have utilized this to share information for this year’s AIA scholarship and for Eric Strain’s exhibit at the Sahara West Library. Each year, one of our committee’s goal is to increase the number of contacts that will allow us to talk to students about architecture and what requirements it takes to become an architect. We’re offering attendance at career fairs, in-person presentation to students in classrooms, and field trips to significant building types.

Another way our committee has reached out to CCSD students this year is through our involvement with other programs that provide education about architecture and construction. We are involved with ACE (Architecture and Construction Education) mentorship. This is a program that is well established with CCSD and other schools in Clark County and is a nationally recognized program with excellent weekly agendas and mentorship encounters. I have also been a judge for the 2022 NEF Design Drafting Competition and a judge for the Senior Project Presentation at the Advanced Technology Academy. The more that the committee members can be involved in these programs the greater chance that we can connect with more students.

Chairman, Education Outreach Committee

AIA 2030 Commitment

The AIA 2030 Commitment sets ambitious achievable targets for carbon reduction –leveraging your influence in the design process. By signing on you gain access to the best practices and comparative tools to track your performance.

- ARCHITECTS HAVE THE POWER TO CREATE A SUSTAINABLE FUTURE
  The 2030 Commitment enables firms of all sizes to advance energy-efficient and resilient design approaches while elevating their practice, boosting their profile and saving money for clients.

- SAVE ENERGY, SAVE MONEY
  A typical 2,500 square-foot single-family home in Mobile, Alabama designed to perform 70% better than the 2030 baseline would yield the following approximate annual savings:
  - 22.6 MWh less energy
  - $2,050 in energy cost
  - 9 metric tons of CO2e reduction

- BUILDINGS GENERATE NEARLY 40% OF ANNUAL GREENHOUSE GAS EMISSIONS.

- DESIGN PRACTICES HAVE THE GREATEST IMPACT ON BUILDING ENERGY USE
  Architects have the most influence on Design

Representatives from AIA Nevada joined colleagues across the country on behalf of the AIA's Lobby Day '22. Our team connected virtually with both Congresswoman Titus & Senator Cortez Masto’s offices to prioritize lobbying efforts in advancing two key pieces of legislation: the Democracy in Design Act (H.R. 5291) and Yes In My Backyard Act (S.1614).

The Democracy in Design Act, sponsored by Nevada Congresswoman Dina Titus, has bi-partisan support and establishes a framework for legislation that would prevent future administrations and federal government agencies from mandating preferred design styles in the design and development of federal buildings. Such “style-neutral” requirements would ensure that communities have a stronger voice in a process which has often times been limited. Currently, a Senate companion bill has not been presented; however, we hope following the AIA’s outreach this will change.

The Yes In My Backyard Act addresses a critical need for transparency in the Community Development Block Grant reporting process. This legislation would require additional reporting and follow-up procedures for communities and projects which receive federal funding through the CDBG process; ultimately yielding more-inclusive zoning and expanding affordable housing opportunities. This bill has been introduced in identical versions in both the House and Senate and awaits further review.

In championing our collective voices, our members were able to demonstrate that the architectural profession encompasses a wide-range of interests and that we can provide insight on many issues facing our communities. We thank our elected officials and their teams for their time and support. We look forward to following-up with each of them should further insights be requested. For more information on this event, visit the AIA’s website.

Maybe there really is no such thing as a dumb question, but sometimes I wonder.

I know, I know--the only dumb question is the one you don't ask. And if you don't ask, how will you ever know? But some questions may be better left un-asked. After all, as the proverb says, "Even a fool, when he holdeth his peace, is counted wise."

And as my dad used to tell me, "Better to remain silent and be thought a fool than to speak and remove all doubt."

A student of Buckminster Fuller, Berkebile was introduced to systems thinking and the concept of “Spaceship Earth” early in his career, and his ensuing designs have been intrinsically linked to the health and well-being of larger support systems. His early epiphanies continually shaped his path through the profession, one marked by an eagerness to collaborate in an effort to improve designs and the quality of the built environment.

“Beyond his noble work to ensure the environmental friendliness of architectural projects, Bob has consistently stood out as a strong advocate for equity in design and female leadership,” wrote U.S. Rep. Emanuel Cleaver, II, in a letter supporting Berkebile’s nomination for the Edward C. Kemper Award. “For over 60 years, Bob has emphasized the importance of health and wellness in relation to architectural design, while making sure to create equitable and inclusive experiences for all people.”

Berkebile is a founding partner of BNIM, the recipient of the 2011 AIA Architecture Firm Award, based in Kansas City, Missouri. In 1981, when the city’s Hyatt Regency skywalks collapsed and killed 114 guests, he had what was the most sobering of his architectural revelations. After a long night of serving as a member of the rescue team, Berkebile emerged with questions about the impact and unintended consequences design has on the people architects serve. In search of answers, he became the founding chair of the AIA’s Committee on the Environment (COTE) with the support of his firm, AIA Kansas City, past presidents, and the first $1 million commitment from the Environmental Protection Agency.

No other awards program has impacted sustainable design like the COTE Top Ten Awards, which honor ten innovative projects and the architects behind them. This year’s winning projects drastically reduce building carbon emissions and give back to communities and the environment—goals that are also at the heart of the Blueprint for Better campaign. Show your support by getting involved now. Join the campaign and help us transform the practice of architecture to achieve a zero-carbon, resilient, healthy, just, equitable future for everyone.

WHAT DOES AIA STAND FOR?

- We stand for equity and human rights
