ON THE COVER - Tucked away among the tall Ponderosa pines is one of many small natural arches in Utah’s Bryce Canyon National Park. The red, iron-rich sandstones and mudstones of the Eocene-age Claron Formation provide beautiful contrast against the winter snow. Photo by Dan Heidenreich, CPG-10085.

American Institute of Professional Geologists (AIPG) is the only national organization that certifies the competence and ethical conduct of geological scientists in all branches of the science. It adheres to the principles of professional responsibility and public service, and is the ombudsman for the geological profession. It was founded in 1963 to promote the profession of geology and to provide certification for geologists to establish a standard of excellence for the profession. Since then, more than 10,000 individuals have demonstrated their commitment to the highest levels of competence and ethical conduct and been certified by AIPG.

The mission of the American Institute of Professional Geologists (AIPG) is to be an effective advocate for the profession of geology and to serve its members through activities and programs that support continuing professional development and promote high standards of ethical conduct.
