On the Cover: Jordan Pond and the North and South Bubbles in the background at Acadia National Park on Mount Desert Island in Maine. Jordan Pond is an oligotrophic lake that was carved out as a result of the Wisconsinian Glaciation. The Bubbles are composed of more resistant rock that were smoothed by the glacial event. Credit: Sara Pearson, CPG-10650.