Ask for the Job: These ideas are old and have been said by many people in different ways, nonetheless, good advice never goes out of style. Our best employees are not necessarily the smartest or most educated ones, but the ones who are honest, teachable and have a good attitude. Talent is completely over-rated. We wanted to suggest a few ideas for newer and older job hunters that require ZERO talent, but might help attract a job offer:

A few things that require zero talent:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Being on time</th>
<th>Good work ethic</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Strong effort</td>
<td>Positive body language</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>High energy</td>
<td>Great attitude</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Passion for project and people</td>
<td>Being coachable and teachable</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Going the extra mile</td>
<td>Being prepared</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Character, Loyalty and Honesty</td>
<td>Manners and showing respect for others</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Common sense</td>
<td>Patience and understanding</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Finding a mentor at AIPG</td>
<td>Becoming a member of AIPG</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
In the job interview, try to show:

1. When you are down – you never quit
2. If you stumble, you get back up
3. When you have had a failure, you learned from the experience
4. Today you are ready to prove yourself again
5. You like to work hard with multidisciplinary teams
6. Ask for the job and be thankful for the interview opportunity

Good luck!
