MODERNIZING SCHOOL INFRASTRUCTURE THROUGH STRATEGIC PLANNING

Aging K-12 school infrastructure remains a major challenge, with many facilities nearing 50 years old and fewer than half having seen major renovations. Despite significant investment in new buildings, maintenance of existing schools is often underfunded. Effective facilities planning must begin with aligning infrastructure to educational goals, focusing on programmatic offerings that attract students and improve outcomes. Assessments of both physical condition and educational adequacy help identify infrastructure gaps, leading to long-term, community-informed planning. Demographic shifts, such as declining birth rates and housing affordability, are further complicating enrollment forecasts and facilities planning decisions.
