Vision Therapy Works

30 Seconds

Female Voice:

My daughter, Sara's a very bright girl, but she struggled with reading. The teacher thought she had ADHD, and her father thought she just wasn't trying hard enough.

Fortunately, I took her to an optometrist who provided an in-office program of optometric vision therapy. It turns out Sara had an eye coordination problem. After a program of vision therapy she now loves to read, loves school and even reads books for pleasure.

Male Voice:

If your child struggles with reading visit the website for the College of Optometrists in Vision Development at COVD dot org, that's covd dot org.
