Introduction of Project
The Dance for Change Project is intended for secondary students (6th-12th grade) to use dance as a platform for creating social change and raising social awareness. This project was originally designed for 7th grade students in Korea. For the project, students first chose a social issue for which they were interested in raising awareness. Then, students chose a song that was related to the issue and choreographed a dance. Students worked during class for about one month, two-three times a week to create the dance. Toward the end of the project, students researched more information about their topic and wrote an informative summary to introduce their dance project. At the conclusion of the project, students performed their dances in the school. One group of students was also able to perform for the public at the “Cheongna Beauty Festival” hosted in Cheongna International City, Korea on October 11, 2017. A video of the performance can be seen here.

Objectives
- To utilize our understanding of social change and take action using music and dance
- To collaborate with peers and recognize the work, effort, and teamwork necessary to convey a message through dance
- To entertain an audience, but more importantly to convey a message of awareness and recognition through the means of dance

Essential Questions
- How does music influence movement?
- How does movement influence music?
- What is “social action”?
- How can dance be used to impact social change?

Time of Project
This project has been designed to be used over a length of time. Based off of the experience with my students, I recommend giving students three 30-minute time periods each week to work on the project. Following this timeframe, the project can be completed in approximately one month.

Structure of Project
1. Introduce the project by discussing with students the meaning of social justice.
   1. Consider the various types of conflicts that occur in the world today.
   2. Discuss how people can make changes and raise awareness about social issues.
   3. Propose how the use of arts, in this case, dance, can be used as a tool to create social change.
   4. Assign the project to the students and divide them into small groups.
2. Have students brainstorm various social issues to determine which one they would like to address. Then, have them search for a song to accompany their social issue.
3. Give students adequate time to work on choreographing their dance. Provide support and guidance in choreography and the best motions to depict the song and issue.
4. Have students research more information about their social issue. Have students write a summary about their social issue and how they are using dance to raise awareness about the issue.
5. Have the students perform! Students should introduce their social issue and explain their project before the dance.
