

Fumbi Chima

Vice President and Chief Information Officer
Wal-Mart Asia

2012 Women of Color New Media/IT Leadership

Fumbi Chima has helped to transform global companies to implement information technology strategies and platforms, and drive revenue growth. She has led business units in banking, finance and investment management services, as well as retail in Latin America, Europe and in the United States. Currently, she is vice president and chief information officer of Wal-Mart Asia. She also serves as one of the officer sponsors for the Wal-Mart women's resource council, secretary of the African American officer caucus and a member of the Information Technology Senior Management Forum (ITSMF). As vice president of technology services and strategic partnerships she was responsible for vendor management, project management, and Walmart's technology services office in India, as well as Walmart's information technology asset management team. Chima earned her bachelor's degree from University of Hull in England. She serves in numerous volunteer roles, including the World Affairs Council - Washington, D.C., STEM-connector, West Essex YMCA and the New Jersey School of Ballet.