ISE announces line-up for Student Development Conference 2019

Author and executive career coach, Zena Everett, will headline this year's ISE Student Development Conference with her esteemed 'Crazy Busy' session on productivity.

Taking place on 20 March 2019 in London, the conference brings together those interested in the transition of graduates and apprentices from education and their development into the work place.

Zena will be joined by Sajaad Jetha, founder of The Smarty Train and author of The Smarts, who will help delegates understand how to hack work and unlock talent. Meanwhile Dr Mick Jackson, WildHearts founder and CEO of Micro-Tyco, will discuss how to future proof graduates and apprentices.

The findings from the ISE's Student Development Survey 2019 will also be announced, providing insight to skills gaps and the work readiness of young people leaving education.

ISE Chief Executive, Stephen Isherwood said: "This is a must-attend event for anyone interested in the development of students in an organisation. We have a fantastic line-up with lots of inspirational advice as well as practical sessions to help employers take their talent to the next level."
