

Job description:

The Department of Fashion Design and Merchandising at Marymount University invites applications for a tenure-track position at the rank of advanced assistant or associate professor in the Fashion Merchandising program beginning in August 2018. Teaching responsibilities include courses in buying, retailing, product development, merchandise planning and analysis, fashion in the global marketplace, and fashion e-commerce. The standard teaching load is 3/3; other responsibilities include scholarship and service.

Job applicant qualifications:

- Applicants must have either an MFA or PhD in Fashion Merchandising or related field
- A minimum of 5 years of experience in fashion merchandising
- Higher education teaching experience, and a record of scholarship

The search committee prefers applicants with experience in assessment in the field of fashion merchandising and with computer application(s) for supply chain management; knowledge of historic costume is also desirable.

For further details and to apply, please visit marymountjobs.com and search for Position M00838

Marymount University is an Equal Opportunity Employer.