Preamble
These principles are intended to aid physicians individually and collectively in maintaining a high level of ethical conduct. They are not law but standards by which a physician may determine the propriety of his conduct in his relationship with patients, with colleagues, with members of allied professions, and with the public.

Principle 1
The primary objective of the medical profession is to render service to humanity with full respect for the dignity of man. Physicians should merit the confidence of patients entrusted to their care, rendering to each a full measure of service and devotion.

Principle 2
Physicians should strive continually to improve their medical knowledge and skill, and should make available to their patients and colleagues the benefits of their professional attainments.

Principle 3
A physician should practice a method of healing founded on scientific basis, and he should not voluntarily associate professionally with anyone who violates this principle.

Principle 4
The medical profession should safeguard the public and itself against physicians deficient in moral character or professional competence. Physicians should observe all laws, uphold the dignity and honor of the profession, and accept its self-imposed disciplines. They should expose, without hesitation, illegal or unethical conduct of fellow members of the profession.

Principle 5
A physician may choose whom he will serve. In an emergency, however, he should render service to the best of his ability. Having undertaken the care of a patient, he may not neglect him; and unless he has been discharged he may discontinue his services only after giving adequate notice.

Principle 6
A physician should not dispose of his services under terms or conditions, which tend to interfere with or impair the free and complete exercise of his medical judgment and skill or tend to cause deterioration of the quality of medical care.

Principle 7
In the practice of medicine a physician should limit the source of his professional income to medical services rendered by him, or under his supervision, to his patients. His fee should be commensurate with the services rendered and the patient's ability to pay. He should neither pay nor receive a commission for referral of patients. Drugs, remedies, or appliances may be dispensed or supplied by the physician provided it is in the best interest of the patient.

Principle 8
A physician should seek consultation upon request, in doubtful or difficult cases, or whenever it appears that the quality of medical service may be enhanced thereby.

Principle 9
A physician may not reveal the confidences entrusted to him in the course of medical attendance or the deficiencies he may observe in the character of patients, unless he is required to do so by law or unless it becomes necessary in order to protect the welfare of the individual or of the community.

Principle 10
The honored ideals of the medical profession imply that the responsibilities of the physician extend not only to the individual but also to society, where these responsibilities deserve his interest and participation in activities, which have the purpose of improving both the health and well being of the individual and the community.
