

Maureen McBeth, PT, MPT, CLT-LANA

Maureen McBeth is a licensed physical therapist and certified lymphedema therapist with over 25 years of experience in oncology rehabilitation, clinical education, and patient advocacy. She currently serves as Senior Medical Affairs Liaison at ImpediMed, where she supports the use of bioimpedance spectroscopy for early lymphedema detection and body composition analysis across medical disciplines.

Previously, Maureen led cancer rehabilitation programs at Mercy Medical Center in Baltimore and was a consultant with healthcare and industry partners to advance lymphatic care. She has been a vital member of the lymphology community since 2004, fostering global collaborations to drive changes in clinical practice.

A nationally recognized educator, Maureen has taught for the Norton School of Lymphatic Therapy and regularly presents at major conferences including the NLN, ACRM, and BC3. Her work is published in peer-reviewed journals and textbooks, and she has participated in medical missions with colleagues in Cali, Colombia.

Maureen is a passionate advocate for evidence-based, patient-centered care and continues to lead initiatives that shape the future of cancer rehabilitation and lymphatic health.
