Anxiety Related Issues (PANDAS, OCD,
Trichotillomania, and more):
Understanding and Intervening Effectively

Aimee Kotrba, PhD

OCD and related disorders (PANDAS, Trichotillomania, and skin picking) have been widely misunderstood and hard to diagnose, especially in children and adolescents. Dr. Kotrba provides information on these anxiety-related disorders, including origin, identification, and evidence-based intervention. Case studies and didactic teaching will provide participants with easy-to-implement plans and tips for helping students.

Mindfulness in "Relationship" with SEL, Trauma, and Building Resilience

Stephanie Dye, LMSW

Lisa Cobb, LMSW

Reducing and managing teacher and student stress is part of a formula for promoting a healthy school climate. Educators play a central role in creating environments that foster student learning and social-emotional well being. Current neuroscience research indicates that mindfulness instruction and practice may promote stress reduction, emotional regulation, focused attention and greater empathy or kindness.

Unpacking SEL Standards:
Assessment, Curriculum, and Progress Monitoring

Susan Jackson, LMSW

This presentation will look at the state social emotional standards and how they relate to school social work direct practice. We will explore ways to determine a student skill deficit based on these standards. We will examine curriculum that will address specific skill areas and discuss ways to demonstrate progress towards skill acquisition.

ASD Strategies and Interventions

Megan Laura, ASD TC

Joseph Ligaj, ASD TC

Meegan Dunn, ASD TC

Susan Kester, ASD TC

This presentation provides participants with more in depth strategies and interventions to use when working with students with Autism Spectrum Disorder. We will discuss the function of behavior and provide strategies that will effectively help to reduce a variety of behaviors that may be seen in the classroom and school environment. We will provide strategies to increase functional and appropriate communication and discuss the educational needs of a student with ASD.
