

David Bruhowzki

Director / Client Advisor

Alex. Brown

David heads up an advisory practice that focuses on corporations, family offices, trust companies, and RIAs with varying degrees of real estate investments and exposures. With a background that includes work in the public and nonprofit sectors, David understands the needs and challenges of clients that operate within the private, corporate, and philanthropic landscapes. David began his financial services career at Lehman Brothers, moved to Morgan Stanley during the financial crisis, and ultimately transitioned to Deutsche Bank's Alex. Brown Division that was subsequently sold to Raymond James. David received his MBA from the University of Michigan's Ross School of Business, MA from the University of Michigan's Rackham Graduate School, and BA from Bowling Green State University. In his spare time, David passionately advises nonprofit groups and is an active member of his university affiliations.
