

Name: Ashley June Moore

Institution: Washington University in St. Louis

Nominated for: Regional Vice President – North Central

Biography:

Ashley has spent over 15 years working with students at various universities in St. Louis and the Pacific Northwest. A St. Louis native with a passion for education equity and holistic student development, Ashley has extensive experience in program management, student engagement, and community outreach. She returned home to work at Washington University (again) in 2017 where she helped lead the university's efforts in broadening education access for underrepresented first generation students from St. Louis area high schools. Since 2021, Ashley has served in her current role where she oversees the design and management of summer session curriculum and programs in the College of Arts & Sciences at WashU. In this capacity, she has had the opportunity to help refine various processes and procedures for A&S Summer Session as well as provide leadership for the College's summer springboard grant application cycle. Ashley holds degrees from Washington University and Fuller Seminary, as well as a certificate in Program Evaluation from the Brown School at WashU. Ashley is a collaborative, relationship-oriented leader with a demonstrated commitment to supporting students throughout their academic journey.

North American Association of Summer Sessions

Ashley has been an active member in both NAASS and the Association of University Summer Sessions. In addition to furthering her learning through the various NAASS-sponsored webinars, she participated in the 2021 NAASS Virtual Summit and currently serves on the planning committee for the 2023 NAASS Annual Conference. Summer session is a unique space on college campuses with many nuances that other university colleagues may not fully understand. As such, she has found tremendous value in being part of the NAASS community. It has provided an outlet for asking questions, sharing resources, and collaborating in ways that help better serve students.
