

Lennox Armstrong

While living in Chicago and pursuing a career in acting, Lennox founded a dog walking business called Canine Care. His first customer was a black lab named Molly, who very much enjoyed eating cigarette butts. Lennox has owned Canine Care since 1992. He has trained several managers, over two hundred fifty dog walkers, countless dogs, and provided service for over five thousand customers.

He has been a NAPPS member since 1998, and volunteer since 2016. Having started his business during a time when not many like businesses were around, he has a great appreciation for the support NAPPS provides the pet care industry. He is excited to contribute to what is already a great organization.
