The President’s Window

Congratulations to PVDA Board member Michele Wellman! She has won the USDF Region 1 GMO Volunteer of the Year award. As most of you know, Michele has been the Show Manager for our PVDA Ride for Life for the past two years, plus she plans on managing it for us in 2013. This is a huge undertaking. Her responsibilities include the Ride for Life Licensed Show, as well as the Gala and the Freestyle Competition. She also sends out our PVDA E-blasts. They are always so informative and well organized! Michele produces our PVDA Schooling Show Omnibus. Where does she get the time? She runs her own barn! Please give a big "thank you" to Michele when you see her.

Bayside
Eiren Crawford Dressage Clinic
High Point Hanoverians, Chestertown, Md.

The Bayside Chapter, on the Shore, had the pleasure to have Eiren Crawford visit us for a one day clinic. The weather cooperated for the most part, and the gorgeous indoor with a convenient auditing area made it conducive to great learning!

Here are notes on each horse/rider combination; helpful exercises from Eiren to improve the foundation and follow the dressage training pyramid. The bullet points are not meant to criticize but to help other riders/readers with similar issues find the right training tool, and use Eirens’ exercises to improve the task at hand.

Our first ride of the day was Charli Plumbtree, from Stevensville, and her lovely 8 year old dark bay gelding “Rastaman’s Island Dancer.” “Rasta,” a Hanoverian/Oldenburg (sired by Rosenthal, one of High Point Hanoverians most popular stallions) is a tall, leggy boy and started off with some resistance/stiffness throughout the topline. He seemed distracted and did not listen to her aids. Eiren chose this scenario to have Charli get off the horse, and show us how to resolve the issue from the ground, rather than “arguing” from the saddle. She shared with us that she learned in-hand training from working at Ingrid Klimke’s stable as well as with Danish rider Morten Thomsen, who is quite the in-hand guru! She demonstrated flexion left and right, as well as bending, yielding and moving away from hand pressure behind the girth. Once horse/rider had an “understanding” Charli got back on and had a more focused horse and a softer topline; the relationship had been re-established. A wider hand, to demonstrate a “true giving,” helped them keep that softness throughout the paces. Horse and rider looked very happy and relaxed at the end.

Next was Wendy Gast, from Grasonville, and her Trakehner/TB cross “Ross.” Wendy is a seasoned rider who enjoys foxhunting and eventing. Ross showed a little resistance and did not truly bend, or give, when the rider asked; he also seemed unusually lazy. So they worked on waking him up from the leg, getting him forward first, while keeping the soft bend at the same time. An open rein to the inside helped Ross understand where his frame needed to be and that softness was not an option but a requirement.

Eiren has a great sense of humor and her advice was right on throughout the day, and her quotes can certainly benefit all of our members. Here are a few:

• “Make him go! He is not believing you!”
• “Once you have the steady contact, do not let it go,

keep it."
• “When I say relax, that does not mean, do not do anything!”
• “If your leg is on the horse, it needs to mean something—ask a question and have a purpose (otherwise the leg just relaxes) so that they do not ignore your aids or get dull to it.”
• “A straight neck = a strong neck/horse”

Pat Chandler, rider and trainer, is from Marydel. She brought her 9 year old Dutch mare “Windsor Willow,” who is currently showing at Second Level. Willow is a beautiful mare, built for the job, compact and lofty gaits. She was a little tense in a new place and held back her potential, but settled in pretty quickly once Eiren and Pat went to work. Transitions were the name of the game, working towards a sharper hind leg, and a quicker reaction to the riders’ leg aids. Eiren reiterated that collection does not equal slow, but instead she wanted more power from behind, sitting behind and getting the shoulders to lift up. At Second level, transitions need to be ridden with “forward” in mind, focusing on not riding the transitions backwards, as in slowing down, but rather channeling the forward energy up!

Velvet Sponaugle, from Dover, brought her darling chestnut mare “Camile,” an 11 year old Oldenburg. What a perfect match for her. The mare is further along in her education, and such a good girl for Velvet. However the mare seemed not to listen to her rider enough. Instead of arguing in the saddle and confusing the horse, Eiren decided to show us some more in-hand work, and in return made Velvet have a try as well: flexing, bending and yielding to hand pressure. It was educational for all the auditors. The mare immediately responded, to the leg and rein pressure, from the ground, and started to step under herself with her inside hind leg. Her back came up and she relaxed her topline and became obedient/submissive to the riders request. Back in the saddle the changes happened quickly. They worked on truly bending in the trot and canter.

Hint from Eiren: when you are doing this exercise, to get the hind legs to cross over, make sure they cross in front of the other hind. When doing this exercise when mounted, make sure to look at the horses inside hind when you do it. In case he spooks or takes off, you will be balanced and can stay on!

Another great quote from Eiren: “The inside hand has a conversation, the outside hand is bossy.”

Anna Smolens, a solid Training Level rider, is ready to move with her horse Kinsdale’s Oreo, up to First Level, and needed to get some pointers for lengthening and transitions within the gait. Oreo is a 7 year old Oldenburg gelding by Concerto Grosso. This horse has the best work ethic and brain, which was put to a test when a nearby thunderstorm decided to unleash a lightning strike close to the indoor! He took a few canter steps and settled right back down, thankfully. They warmed up very well, relaxed and forward, showed some great transitions from behind. Eiren needed a new challenge and decided to step it up a bit. They worked on walk/canter/walk while keeping the bent and controlling the haunches at the same time. Riding the transitions in a leg yield-fashion helped both of them stay straight, without drifting haunches. Smaller circles were the next exercise, teaching him to balance, without losing the rhythm or switching leads. Her advice here was to only make the circle so small that he keeps the rhythm. If you feel that he gets quick, or flat, or breaks, make it immediately bigger, until he rebalances and try again.

Pat Chandler, was the last rider of the day, with her 18 hand “Uno,” also a Dutch gelding. He has been Pat’s horse since he was 5 and due to his size, his education takes more time and patience than her smaller more compact mare. As Pat would say, “his legs are soooo far from his brain”…but he can move! Expressive horse, powerful and such a good boy, too. Pat focused on leg yielding and bending in the walk and trot first, that later translated into canter work. Uno needs to be mentally challenged in his work to stay focused on Pat, so there were lots of changes of direction and transitions, always something different and new so it never got boring. Within 45 minutes this big horse got softer in his body and pliable.

Thank You to Klaus, Larissa and John from High Point Hanoverian for hosting and making your beautiful arena available to us. We learned a lot, laughed a lot and enjoyed a delicious Smith Island Red Velvet cake for lunch, courtesy of the “Clabber Hill Furniture” store in Church Hill.

Thank You Eiren for your invaluable insights and your great sense of humor!
Greetings from the Eastern Shore

“Ride With Your Mind” with Lisa May

By Anna Smolens and Anne Thibo

In July we had the unique opportunity to invite a local clinician to our monthly meeting and get some insight to a different kind of teaching method, one that focuses more on the rider than the horse.

Do you think top riders are simply the lucky few with natural talent? Do you think you’ll only make it to the top in the Dressage world with the perfect Dressage horse? Maryland-based instructor Lisa May, the first U.S. coach accredited in Mary Wanless’ “Ride With Your Mind” technique, believes talent is a learned skill and that anyone can become a better rider.

Lisa began riding in the Hunter/Jumper world as a child before switching to Dressage as an adult where she continued riding and taking clinics with riders such as Olympians Lendon Grey and Carol Lavell. She teaches with Mary in the U.S. throughout the year. She has an encouraging and supportive teaching style coupled with great communication skills explaining how the brain and body works.

Lisa explained the Ride With Your Mind technique by having the members interact with one another in demonstrations that clearly showed how communication and being more aware of your body can influence your riding. In one exercise, volunteer Anne Thibo was asked to lay down in the barn aisle! while the rest of the members were divided into three groups.

One group was only allowed to talk to her through the movements between lying down to a standing position, one group could only physically move her, and the last group could only demonstrate movements for Anne to duplicate. This illustrated how words are often interpreted differently by different people, how physically moving someone is difficult if they don’t understand what you’re trying to do, and how physically showing someone how to do something is often the quickest and easiest way to communicate.

She also showed us an image of a sensory homunculus—a visual representation of the connection between different body parts and how much brain power they are typically allotted—the bigger the body part, the more brain power is dedicated to sensing it. Most notable for riders are the extremely large hands, large feet, and very small pelvis and trunk area. This natural sensory perception pattern is an obstacle that must be overcome for most riders, who should be listening to and using their seat before legs and hands. The Ride With Your Mind technique aims to correct this imbalance by breaking down the process of learning how to ride into small pieces that are understandable.

Mary’s methods help translate what a trainer is often trying to tell a student. Actions that are easy for many trainers and top riders are often thought of as one idea—“use your seat to stop,” “get your horse on the bit,” or “collect the canter”—and they teach their students as if they were teaching themselves. However, most students need to know the breakdown of the aids or movements in order to learn to do them correctly. Using science and body awareness, Mary’s system clarifies the elusive “how” of riding in detail while making it easy to understand. Her research has helped bridge the gap in the brain between the area that is responsible for physical skills and the area for verbal descriptions, resulting in a powerful way to teach feel.

Mary’s longtime student Heather Blitz was named as an alternate for this year’s London Olympic Dressage team. Heather currently writes the popular Dressage Today Clinic photo critique series, giving great examples of what the technique covers. Mary has recently had two articles on rider stability and influence published in Dressage Today as well.

Lisa operates Idylwild Farm in Federalsburg, Md. She teaches riders of any age and all levels on horses of varying breeds and backgrounds. Lisa teaches both at home and at local private farms as well as traveling to coach clinics. The Bayside Chapter is planning a clinic with Lisa in the future.

Are You Ready to Begin Training the Dressage Flying Change?

By Jaclyn Sicoli

If the thought of training flying changes seems a bit overwhelming, then this article is for you. My goal is to answer some general questions and help you evaluate whether your horse is ready to learn the flying change.

This year I coached two students to their USDF Bronze medals. Working with them underscored the need to prepare and highlighted challenges for horses and riders learning flying changes for the first time.

USDF dressage tests introduce flying changes at Third Level. At this level of competition and training, the horse needs to demonstrate some degree of uphill balance, self-carriage, and increased engagement as well as a longer list of criteria, which ensure the horse is on the aids.

Although most horses offer flying changes readily at a young age, dressage training prepares both horse and rider to execute this movement with balance and control. There are several reasons why dressage training introduces this movement mid-way on the road from Training Level to Grand Prix. Dressage teaches submission, improves self-carriage and balance, provides movements and exercises to develop the horse, and tests the rider.

If you can answer yes to the following questions then you are on the right track to begin training the flying change:

1. To measure submission: Does your horse turn, stop, and go when you ask?

Unlike other movements, which you can first introduce in the walk, you must keep the gas on for the flying changes and introduce them on the go. As a result, the rider must think and act in the moment to maintain control despite the horse’s excitement or confusion. For sensitive horses, learning flying changes for the first time may be like turning the world upside down because a sensitive horse pays close attention to the rules of the canter game and may react as if to say “how dare you change the rules?” Typically, while learning the flying change, the horse wants to quicken his stride and may be surprised by the rider’s leg aids. Just like the learning curve you encountered the first time you asked your horse for a leg-yield or haunches-in, it may take a few tries for the horse to respond correctly to the flying change aids. The horse’s response to your aids and ability to remain submissive to your aids throughout the learning process is crucial.

2. To address self-carriage and balance: Does your horse feel comfortable cantering a 10-meter circle?

In order for the horse to bring both hind legs underneath his body and strike onto the new canter lead, he must develop enough strength and balance to engage his hind-legs and carry his forehand slightly uphill, like a draw bridge making room for the boats. Once he feels comfortable doing so, the best way to ensure that he changes cleanly from one lead to the other is to set him up for success by positioning the his body so that it is mechanically easy to change leads. Picture the horse’s body as a cashew on a 10 meter circle when viewed from above, with flexion and bend in the direction of the circle. When coming onto a straight line from the 10 meter circle across the diagonal, the rider should straighten the horse and change the flexion and bend slightly to the new direction. The rider's legs change position applying the primary aid as the new outside leg slides back behind the girth and the new inside leg comes forward. If your horse can balance and bend correctly on the 10 meter circle, then he is likely to have the strength to carry himself through a balanced flying change.

3. Practice makes preparedness: Can your horse maintain counter canter and perform canter to walk and walk-to-canter transitions?

This question relates to both of the previous questions because it seeks to confirm in a new way that your horse is mentally and physically ready to learn flying changes. Your horse must know that the true lead is correct. This will help ensure that (i) he tries to offer a new lead when changing directions, and (ii) he listens for a change in your aids before offering the flying change. Practicing transitions between canter and walk as well as simple changes builds strength and plants seeds for future flying changes. If you have encouraged your horse to anticipate the next step and rewarded him for his willingness to work, you will now reap the rewards.

4. To test the rider: Are you comfortable navigating changes in gait, tempo, and bend?

To be ready to take on the challenge of the flying changes, you must already feel like the BOSS in your relationship with your horse. When your horse is unsure, you must know the answer and can encourage the behavior that you want. Imagine filming scenes of your own training video. Start with a plan of action and consider all possible outcomes. What will you do if your horse changes leads up front without change behind? How will you reward the correct response? How will you alleviate tension and clear up confusion?

When you can answer yes to the above questions, you are ready to begin training flying changes with your horse. Remember to make a plan, practice, and prepare for a positive outcome.

Did you know that Southern States will give PVDA free money? On each bag of Southern States brand horse feed with the names of Legends, Triple Crown or Nutrena, there are proof of purchase coupons. They are located at the top of each bag, so they are not difficult to clip out. PVDA, as a horse show organization, can receive 25 cents for each coupon. This really mounts up when we all save our coupons and pile them together. You can clip yours and send them to PVDA Treasurer Carolyn del Grosso, or give them to any Board member.

As a reminder, our Annual Business Meeting will be held on November 5. This is required by our PVDA By-laws: All members are invited to attend. If you have never seen Linda Speer’s beautiful indoor arena in Clarksville, this would be the time to drop by to attend the meeting. We welcome and value your participation in PVDA.

As I stated last month, the Annual Awards Banquet will be held this year on January 5, 2013, at Turf Valley Country Club near Baltimore. Please come out and cheer for your favorite award winner. We all work so hard training and showing, the Awards Dinner is a place where you can bask in your success!

Start planning for next year! Contact me any time at 703-771-3231.

PVDA Schooling Show
The Mane Event at Andover Farm, Linthicum, Md. • October 14, 2012

It was a perfect day for a dressage show. Although there were not as many entries as in past shows held at Andover, everyone turned out ready to compete and put in great rides. The new facility managers, Steve Lauria and Laurie Bay, have been working hard and making improvements to the facility since taking over in October 2011, and received many compliments on the well-cared for showgrounds. As always, Aviva Nebesky, our judge, provided each and every rider with important feedback and constructive criticism, which is always greatly appreciated. I am greatly appreciative to her for coming out for a smaller than normal show.

Of course, there could be no show without a crew of dedicated volunteers. I am so grateful that Mary Russell contacted me with an interest in helping out. She was a huge asset in double-checking our measurements for the arena and being willing to scribe for all of our rides. Thank you to Laurie and Steve for allowing PVDA the use of the facilities for the morning, and for helping to build the arena and drag the footing. Lexi Lefevre and Lauren O’Neil were also a huge help in setting the arena and helping to score the tests. Marisa Soboloski did a fantastic job working the in-gate and warm-up arena, keeping everyone moving along, and also keeping the judge and scribe supplied with coffee and muffins. The Watts family was also helpful in scoring tests and assisting with the arena reset and take down. What a great event to host during The Mane Event’s First Year Anniversary Month! PVDA was fortunate to be offered a date for the USDF Region 1 Adult Team Competition but the unfortunate thing was that it was just two weeks after the Ride for Life and in the hottest part of the summer. We opted to go ahead with the date and we had great participation. A three ring show was held July 7 & 8 at the Prince George’s Equestrian Center. The weekend was incredibly hot with temps soaring into the 100s. Manager Shannon Pedlar and secretary Carolyn Del Grosso went to extraordinary efforts to keep horses and competitors going during the weekend. A big misting fan was rented for the horses and water galore was available free of charge at each ring. Judges had cooling neck wraps, battery powered fans and hand held misting fans. These were also available for ring stewards and runners. Spirits were high as teams competed at intro, training, first, second and mixed levels. Scores were as high as the spirits with many 70% scores given out by our judges and everyone held up well. At the same time a regular recognized show was also going on. The new covered arena was a godsend with two rings under cover we only had one ring out in the hot sun. A huge thank you to Patuxent Nursery for re-donating the screen plants from the Ride for Life which were used in between the two rings under the covered arena. The rings were only about 8 feet apart so having a nice screen of bushes and trees was helpful in reducing distractions. Volunteers were sparse since so many were used for the Ride for Life but all were cheerful and filled in to get the job done. As always a huge shout out to everyone who helped out we could not have done it without you!!! With lessons learned we hope to do the show again next year since the show was highly profitable for PVDA and gives the adults a chance to get in on more team fun.

Individual Scores are Averages for the rider from the two days.
