

Instructor Disclosure

Policy:

The Society of Fire Protection Engineers (SFPE) is committed to upholding the highest ethical values and to encourage professional and principled behavior by its staff and volunteers. Each Board of Directors, committee member, officer, and staff receives a copy of the Society's ethics policy. The code is binding on all volunteers, instructor participants and staff.

Purpose:

This policy applies all persons involved in the delivery of continuing professional development content to disclose any real or apparent conflict they may have as related to the content of the activity. All identified conflicts of interest are thoroughly vetted by SFPE for balance, scientific objectivity of studies mentioned in materials or used as the basis for content. Instructors should disclose any significant relationship they may have with a manufacturer company or service that may be mentioned as part of their content, as well as any direct relationship with the manufacturer who may be a supporter of the educational activity.

Responsibility:

The Director of Professional Development under the guidance of the Professional Development Committee ensures that this policy is followed and implemented within the Society.

Course Financial and In-Kind Support Disclosure at the Start of the Course

For a live, group course

This webinar, "Tall Buildings," was funded in its entirety by the American Association of Tall Buildings who manufacturers materials that are used to make 'tall buildings'.

For an asynchronous course

This self-study online course was written by Steve Harvey. Partial funding to develop and deliver this course was provided by Jensen Hughes Company

Definition of and examples of disclosing in-kind support

In-kind support is contributions of things such as products, materials and equipment, volunteers, professional or other services, publicity, etc., but not money.

1. We want to thank Tyco Products for the use of its online registration services and its auditorium for today's course.
2. The American Association of Tall Buildings provided volunteers to assist with registration for today's course.
3. Jensen Hughes, Inc. provided the refreshments for today's event.
