

VOLUNTEER OPPORTUNITIES

There are many opportunities to get involved in the SID, depending on your interests and availability. These include activities that take place throughout the calendar year, and those that occur during and around the time of the annual meeting. Please review the following the following ways to contribute to the SID.

Service on SID Standing and ad hoc Committees

COMMITTEES/TASK GROUPS/WORKING GROUPS: The SID maintains a variety of Standing and ad hoc Committees, each charged with a different set of tasks and goals. There is an online for with the list of current openings (see link below). Nominees provide a summary of research interests and previous activity in the SID. The slate of candidates is matched with the scope of the program/activity defined in the Committee charge.

Volunteer Opportunities for SID Trainee Programs:

TRAINEE DINNER HOST

The Trainee Dinner occurs on Friday during the SID meeting. Table Hosts lead informal discussions with Trainees registered for the meeting. Tables are arranged by themes and areas of clinical/research interest. The dinner runs from approximately 7:00 - 9:00 pm.

RESIDENT RETREAT FACULTY

The Resident Retreat is one of the SID's signature educational programs, designed to facilitate new pathways for interested Dermatology residents to pursue a career in dermatologic research, providing Dermatology Residents (individuals with an MD or MD/PhD) with the tools to create a successful and sustainable career in research. The Resident Retreat is held in conjunction with the SID annual Meeting, commencing on Tuesday evening and continuing on Wednesday.

PHD RETREAT FACULTY

The PhD Retreat was developed to complement the Resident Retreat. The program is designed to pave the career path in dermatologic research for young investigators with a PhD. Interactions with Faculty (including Industry scientists) is intended to identify the critical success factors for a successful and sustainable career in research. The PhD Retreat is held in conjunction with the SID annual Meeting, commencing on Tuesday evening and continuing on Wednesday.
