MEMBER SPOTLIGHT
SARA RIND, ASSOC. AIA

I am a member of AIA because... it keeps me connected to my community, profession, and new learning opportunities.

Having lived in Las Vegas for the past twenty-three years, receiving my degree from UNLV, and starting a family, this city has become my home. My interest in the built environment started as soon as I could swing a hammer to build treehouses and it has continued to provide fun and inspiration to me every day. This has evolved into my new favorite pastime of exploring unknown cities with my family. We love to get lost with only a general idea of where we might end up, always finding something new and surprising around each corner that one might never experience by following the recommended path.

I embrace the complexity of all sizes and types of projects. Working as a project manager for Simpson Coulter Studio, my current focus is on civic and educational work. Finding the best solution between both the cohesive and dissonant ideas about spaces that affect so many people is a challenge that drives my passion.

What is the most important thing you have learned? The most important thing I’ve learned is that every experience, interaction and story you are a part of can teach you if you stop and listen. Architects can provide added value to clients by integrating their thought processes into the client’s philosophies, practices, and challenges in order to reshape their environment and improve their daily lives. It seems that the most innovative ideas come from stepping away from what you know and understanding the approaches to solve challenges used by others.

How do you think the profession will evolve in the next 5-10 years? I believe that the next area of innovation within our industry is to embrace interactive technologies within the built environment. As the human environment becomes a greater blend of digital and physical realities, architecture must break its current boundaries and create new relationships to the human condition.

Where will you be in 20 years? Twenty years from now, I see myself still grabbing every opportunity to learn new things whenever possible and sharing what I discover with others. Architecture has so many facets to be involved in, but it’s more than a profession to me; it’s a part of who I am and what I love to do.
I am a big fan of Downtown Las Vegas. Most of you know that John and I bought a condo at Juhl with the intent of moving downtown after selling our current home, which is still available for anyone interested, btw. As is usual for most of us architects, after our purchase of the Juhl condo, we pulled out the tracing paper and started our remodel plans, including a version of ‘what if we purchased the unit next door and see what we would do then’ plan. After working on some amazing schemes (that were crazy), we came to the realization that we have 3 dogs and are not ready to be living on the 14th floor of a high-rise…..yet.

We did the next best thing to moving downtown. We are now in the process of remodeling a circa 1951 home in the vintage McNeill Manor neighborhood, just east of Rancho and south of Charleston……‘downtown adjacent’, as I like to call it. Not immediately downtown, but a mere 3-mile bike ride away.

Now, the reason I am telling you this is because a few weeks ago, inside the City Council Chambers, there was a fascinating panel of prominent Las Vegas developers and real estate people that was assembled and sponsored by the Downtown Vegas Alliance and Urban Land Institute in partnership with the City. The panel included Sam Cherry, CEO of Cherry Development; Christina Roush of HB Properties; John Curran of the Downtown Project and Uri Vaknin of KRE Capital.

As a special speaker and additional panel member, the Downtown Vegas Alliance brought in Peter Cummings, a very successful developer that is seemingly single-handedly revitalizing downtown Detroit. For those of us that have seen Detroit before any revitalization efforts were started, it was the most eye-opening presentation we have ever seen. As Peter said, “when Whole Foods opened a store at one of my new developments, I knew that my efforts were working”. The opening of this high scale supermarket proved that it was a matter of an unmatched need for a very underserved neighborhood.

Peter joined the panel and it was a lively discussion about issues the residential developers are having with downtown Las Vegas; rising costs of land, lack of diverse job markets, parking issues, lack of a true supermarket (although there is the Market on Fremont and another market yet to open at the Juhl). As Christine rightfully pointed out about the lack of a full size supermarket, it is the proverbial chicken and egg question. Peter’s photo of hundreds of people standing outside the Whole Foods just prior to the opening clearly showed the need in downtown Detroit.

One of the very interesting points of Peter’s talk about his work revitalizing Downtown Detroit was that he always planned his residential developments around cultural, civic or medical districts. People want these amenities and companies are now moving to Downtown Detroit not necessarily because they want their offices there, but rather because that is where the younger workforce wants to be…...

As Christine rightfully pointed out about the lack of a full size supermarket, it is the proverbial chicken and egg question. Peter’s photo of hundreds of people standing outside the Whole Foods just prior to the opening clearly showed the need in downtown Detroit.

Another of Peter’s words of advice to Las Vegas Developers wanting to develop residential in our downtown was to keep the developments small. As he said, “the Strip are the big projects”……..keep the scale more manageable downtown.

While Downtown Las Vegas needs more residential projects, there are good signs that things are moving forward. The sales of units at the Ogden have been going well, with single people, young families and empty nesters showing the diversity of people moving downtown is expanding. The Juhl, Newport and Soho Lofts are fully occupied and the units at the Juhl are now going up for sale. Pre-leasing at Fremont 9 Apartments, adjacent to Atomic Liquors are expected to begin in July. Developers such as Sam Cherry and architect/developers such as Tom Schoeman are in the planning stages for more residential developments scattered around downtown.

With the planning stages moving forward for the Art Museum at Symphony Park, I can’t help but wonder when we might start seeing residential developments at this civic heart of the city. Seems like it would be a great next step as the downtown matures and with the addition of multiple pedestrian connections across the railroad property, it could be a great future growth potential. Have you seen the High Line in NY….wouldn’t an experience like that be a great, much needed park addition to downtown connecting the burgeoning downtown to Symphony Park?
Reflecting on the Past 20 Years and Looking Forward to the Next 20
Currently, among a variety of other concerns, AIA members are confronted with issues of de-licensure, liability and political action. What does the 2015 U.S. Supreme Court ruling in the North Carolina State Board of Dental Examiners v. FTC have to do with our profession? How do you maintain a standard of care when your jurisdiction does not follow a building code? Why are state PACs a critical element in national advocacy activities? These issues, along with several other focus topics, were addressed during the 2017 State Government Network (SGN) Meeting last week in St. Louis.

The SGN is comprised of AIA representatives from across the country in an effort to provide insight on issues facing the profession at the state-level. Serving as the AIA Nevada SGN representative, this event helped me to better understand the wide-ranging challenges facing the profession and how to engage them. Furthermore, it strengthened my appreciation for the collective volunteer advocacy efforts of fellow AIA members. Having participated in a variety of presentations related to issues facing other states, I am proud of our AIA chapter and the NSBAIDRD for their continued actions in addressing the challenges such as those shared during the SGN network meeting. Our state has a strong history of leaders advocating for the profession and I look forward to supporting the SGN and our membership.

During Nevada’s recent Legislative session, legislation regarding lien laws related to design professionals was once again reviewed. However, the proposed bill did not make much progress. Throughout this process, SGN representatives shared their experiences with similar bills from their states. Sharing in these discussions provided a stronger understanding of such legislation and helped to further inform AIA members as they prepare for future legislative proposals. As a profession, we must engage the political process.

Your backing will help to advance our advocacy efforts at the national level. The ArchiPAC will provide non-partisan backing to those elected officials who support initiatives which the AIA promotes. Collectively, our sponsorship will ensure the issues our profession defends are addressed at the highest levels and that our voices are heard. To review such issues, be sure to visit www.aia.org/advocacy.
AIA LAS VEGAS PARTNERS WITH UNLV SPECIAL COLLECTIONS FOR “BUILDING LAS VEGAS”

AIA Las Vegas is pleased to partner with the UNLV University Libraries Special Collections & Archives to collect and preserve the history of the growth of our city, and to provide a Summer Speaker Series. The Series will be presented at the Historic Fifth Street School and features panel discussions from experts who have helped direct and shape the growth of our city.

The panel series kicks off with “Reimaging Downtown” on Thursday, July 6 at 5:30PM in the auditorium of the Historic Fifth Street School. This panel of experts includes Curtis L. Myles, III CEO and President of the Las Vegas Monorail Company, Thomas J. Schoeman, AIA, Architect and Donald D. Snyder, Presidential Advisor for Strategic Initiatives at UNLV, and will examine past and present plans for the redevelopment of Downtown Las Vegas as a tourist and entertainment destination and as an urban residential neighborhood.

The second in the Series will be “A Woman’s Place Is...” Scheduled for Thursday, August 3 at 5:30PM. This panel of high-achieving women will share their experiences in shaping the growth and development of downtown. Panelists include, Chris Giunchigliani, Clark County Commissioner, District E, Sharon Hwang, Vice President, JHK Investment Group, Inc. and Chinatown Plaza, Jennifer A. Lewis, Vice President, Lewis Group of Companies and Laura Jane Spina, President and CEO RAFI * Andoscia Architecture Joint Venture.

The third in the Series will be “Turning The Tide: Water in the Desert” on Thursday, September 7, 2017, featuring Jacob David “Jay” Bingham, Owner and President JDB, Robert E. Lewis, President, Nevada Division, Lewis Group of Companies, Pat Mulroy, Senior Fellow, William S. Boyd School of Law, UNLV, and Virginia Valentine, President Nevada Resort Association.

There is no charge to attend but you must RSVP online at www.library@unlv.edu/specialsummerseries or email Lonnie.marshall@unlv.edu Or call 702-895-4517

2018-2019 ELECTIONS FOR SERVICE ON THE BOARD

At the June 20th meeting of the AIA Las Vegas Board of Directors, the board voted to increase the number of voting positions on the Board from 10 to 13 members, by adding 3 additional directors positions. We now have five director positions open for election to serve on the 2018-2019 Board of Directors.

It is an honor to be elected for service on the Chapter’s Board. Only those members who are most dedicated and have demonstrated a commitment to the AIA qualify for service. The success of our Chapter depends upon having strong leadership, and looking toward the future with a working BOD that is composed of members who understand the value and strength of the organization, and are willing to commit their time and resources to strengthening the Chapter. We need leaders who will move the Chapter forward while upholding and protecting the profession and leading the way for those who are just entering the profession.

Each Director must make a commitment to accept the requirements of service as a priority. As a member of the Board and a leader of the Chapter, Directors are required to attend all AIA Membership Meetings, special events and social functions and to support the Chapter’s efforts in all programs. Directors are responsible for the financial security of the Chapter and generating the funding for programs and benefits. Directors must know the policies and procedures of the AIA, and act in accordance with these governances. Directors seek out opportunities to be ambassadors for the Chapter and actively work to encourage new members, engage civic and community leaders and positively represent their fellow members and the organization at all times.

Wright Engineers has again been ranked as one of the nation’s best engineering firms to work for by Zweig White and Associates. This prestigious ranking recognizes firms who have created outstanding workplaces through design, teamwork, excellent benefits and amenities, and workplace culture, and is based on a combination of employee surveys and corporate evaluations. For 2017, Wright Engineers is ranked number 6 nationally among structural engineering firms. “Positive, enjoyable, drama free, professional,” “sense of teamwork,” “huge opportunities for personal and professional growth,” and “feels like I’m working with family,” are typical of the anonymous survey responses given by team members.

GREENING THE WMR

AIA Las Vegas is hosting the Western Mountain Region conference in October 2017 and we want to make the conference as sustainable as possible. Our committee has the following ideas but would love to hear from the membership on creative ways ideas to green our convention.

• Recycling paper
• Electronic versus printed materials
• Transportation options (like a bike share between the hotel and the 5th Street School)
• Refillable water bottles instead of bottled water

If you are interested in helping Green the WMR please contact Jennifer at Jennifer@codagroupinc.com with your ideas!

Are you looking for a chance to get more exposure to current topics and discussions within the profession? If so, you’re in luck! The 2017 AIA Western Mountain Region Conference is officially open for registration this month – and it will be held right here in Las Vegas. As an Emerging Professional, it’s not always easy to get the necessary funds and time off to attend an interesting design conference out of town. But no need for airline tickets or hotel fees for this conference, and with a handful of volunteer hours you’ll also be able to attend for free as well! So start the discussions with your firms now – “professional/business development” goes a long way on those time-off requests. The EPYAF is even organizing a Pub Crawl throughout Downtown LV’s revitalized bar scene – so get ready!

UPDATE - The Memoir Monday featuring Windom Kimsey, FAIA is scheduled for Monday, July 17th at 6pm at the TSK Offices. (314 S. Water St., Henderson, NV. 89015) The Memoir Monday series gives emerging professionals a chance to sit down with an established, local architect and hear about their career in a small group setting.

As a reminder, we have established an online discussion board as a way to create an open dialogue concerning current items that affect our profession – especially ones related to Emerging Professionals (students, associate AIA members, and newly licensed architects):
http://aialv-epyaf.proboards.com/
Currently we have information and articles related to the Intern Titling debate posted. We hope to create an ongoing dialogue between not only EPs, but all AIA members – so please join the discussion!

If you are interested in helping out with the planning and promoting of these events, have some ideas of your own, or would like to be part of the Emerging Professionals committee in any way – please email me: talen@csdarchitecture.com

Protecting your relationships.

In the design and construction industry, there is no better way to protect your relationships than by using AIA Contract Documents. As the industry standard for over 120 years, our pre-drafted agreements and forms define the expectations and terms involved in your project, ensuring all parties are aware of responsibilities. Developed with input from key stakeholders, and recognized by courts across the country, AIA Contract Documents protect your project from start to finish.

Simplify

Summer is here and with the rising temperatures comes one of the most celebrated days of the year, the Fourth of July. On this patriotic date, let’s take good care of our country and our planet by simplifying what we do and how we do it.

Stay Active

Did you know that an average passenger vehicle emits 423 grams of CO2 per mile? Exhaust from cars contributes to the city’s heat island effect, and this summer we are already having record temperatures. This 4th of July let’s be car independent, walk, cycle, use public transportation, or carpool to get to our destinations.

Added benefit: We won’t have to worry about driving home after drinking some beer!

Be Mindful

In the U.S. alone, about 100 million tons of carbon dioxide are emitted each year due to air conditioning use. If you plan on being inside, please make sure your A/C is operating efficiently. There are many things that we can do to achieve this: clean out air filters, keep doors and windows closed, and cool only the rooms that are going to be used at that time if possible.

Say NO to plastic

About 7 million tons of plastics get generated in the U.S. as disposable goods in the form of plates and cups every year, but sadly only about 9 percent of that gets recycled. If you are having guests over for the long weekend, opt for reusable silverware, cups, and plates or biodegradable ones. Many stores now offer eco-friendly choices that are a fairly inexpensive way of making a difference.

Plan, Plan, Plan

According to the UN, a third of the food produced annually in the world for human consumption is lost or wasted. This environmental, economic and social problem is accentuated on holidays. Fourth of July is famous for its BBQs, abundance of food and beverages, but let’s try to be more mindful. The idea is not to stop having traditional meals, but to do it in a more sustainable way. We can start by studying our shopping lists, buying just what we need, conserving perishable products in the freezer and choosing local and seasonal products.

This fourth of July, let’s look after our country and reduce our carbon footprints!
