Firan Technology Group Corporation (“FTG”) Announces Transport Canada Has Granted TSO for FTG’s Cursor Control Device Avionic Equipment

TORONTO, Jan. 31, 2019 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Firan Technology Group Corporation (TSX:FTG), a leading provider of electronic products and avionic sub-systems for the aerospace and defense markets, has received its Canadian Technical Standard Order (CAN-TSO) certification from TRANSPORT CANADA for FTG’s Cursor Control Device (CCD). The CAN-TSO certification can be used for receiving FAA-TSO certification under the bilateral agreement between Canada and the United States. With this design and production approval, production of the CCD can commence.

FTG’s CCD is an innovative, customizable, joystick-based design that is an integral part of the Human-Machine-Interface (HMI) in modern avionics. CCD’s are utilized by pilots for precision cursor navigation on the aircrafts primary flight displays.

This CAN-TSO will serve as the CCD product certification baseline for other future variants of CCD that are to be built by FTG.

“After achieving this major step, our CCD is now available in the market and ready for production. We have received initial production orders and are excited to move from a design/development phase to production. We thank our customers for their support and we appreciate their business,” stated Brad Bourne, President and CEO, FTG Corporation.
