Angie Fiedler Sutton

Executive Assistant
AATA

Angie Fiedler Sutton is the Executive Assistant at American Addiction Treatment Association.

She has extensive administrative and marketing experience, most of which in the nonprofit world. This includes the administrative assistant to executive services at The Kansas City Public Library, the office manager for the American Association of Grant Professionals (now known as Grant Professionals Association), and the project manager for the Latino Donor Collaborative. She also has lots of experience working with the arts community in Kansas City, where she lived prior to coming to Los Angeles, doing everything from working the box office to directing.

Angie received her MA in Specialized Journalism: The Arts from University of Southern California's Annenberg School for Communication and Journalism. Angie is married and freelances in her free time. She mostly covers performing arts and geek culture, and has been published in Stage Directions, LA Weekly, The Mary Sue, and more. She also does her own podcast. You can see her work at her website (www.angiefsutton.com).
