

ACBSP UPDATE

January 2002

News From the President

As the fall semester comes to a close, it is appropriate to thank all of you for the hard work and dedication demonstrated since our 13th Annual Conference in New York City. This fall has been a busy but gratifying one for your Board of Directors, both Boards of Commissioners, for all of our Regional Officers, for our standing and special committees, and for our headquarters staff. Your efforts are definitely appreciated.

In addition to agenda-packed fall Board Meetings for all three Boards, each of our regions conducted their fall Regional Meeting. Either Dr. Frank Wert or Dr. Gary DeBauche (or both) was able to attend and participate in all but two of the meetings. Our regional meetings continue to illustrate the commitment to ACBSP as demonstrated by each of the regional officers and their regional membership.

As we look forward to the spring semester, the calendar of ACBSP activities is full. All three Boards will be meeting, Regional Presidents will be meeting with the Board of Directors, standing and special committee work will continue, and numerous accreditation site visits will occur. I am sure the result of these upcoming efforts will again illustrate this association's ongoing pursuit of excellence.

During January, please look forward to receiving the conference brochure for our 14th Annual Conference "Energizing Education Excellence". Your Conference Committee has planned a diverse and informative collection of keynote speakers, panel discussions, and workshops, which will have something of interest to everyone and guaranteed to energize our minds. You may be interested in attending a series of presentations focusing on student involvement. Or, perhaps your interest is in identifying methods to energize your classroom, or you sense a need to energizing your business unit team, or your business product offering. Maybe your immediate concern is to energize and maximize your ACBSP accreditation with your students, faculty, business partners, and stakeholders. Whatever your personal or institutional goals, there will be multiple activities to interest and energize you.

Your conference schedule also allows time for committee meetings, regional meetings, accreditation meetings, reaffirmation meetings, and honor society meetings so that we can further our pursuit of excellence for our association.

Additionally, your Conference Committee has scheduled time for us to recognize and celebrate our accomplishments -- our newly accredited institutions, our reaffirmations, our regional and national teaching excellence winners, and our Academic Hall of Fame winner.

Please be sure you have your calendar cleared for June 21-24, 2002. Complete your registration information and make your reservations early so we will be sure to see all of you in Houston as we all work toward "Energizing Education Excellence".

NEWS FROM HEADQUARTERS

Regional Presidents set to meet with ACBSP Board of Directors

The Presidents of the eight regional councils will meet with the Board of Directors at the February Board meeting in Kansas City. The purpose of the joint meeting is to provide a forum for the regions to bring local issues before the Board, to coordinate ongoing committee work, to enhance communications, and to further promote the mission of ACBSP. Let your regional president know of topics and issues that you believe should be brought before the Board.

Executive Director participates in HACU meeting

As part of the cooperative agreement signed between ACBSP and the Hispanic Association of Colleges and Universities (HACU) Dr. Wert participated on a panel of specialized accreditors at HACU's annual conference held in October in San Juan, Puerto Rico. Panel members addressed "Specialized International Accreditation: Issues and Trends in Higher Education."

Regional Councils conclude fall meetings

Six of the eight regional councils held very successful meetings during the fall semester with extremely diverse and interesting programs. With excellent leadership, good attendance and suburb member participation, the regional meetings once again proved to be vital components of the ACBSP mission. The unexpected did occur, however, when the Region VI meeting, scheduled for November 29 and 30 in Wichita Falls, Texas, was cancelled due to snow. The meeting is rescheduled for January 31 and February 1.

Board of Directors and Baccalaureate/Graduate Board of Commissioners vacancies to be considered

ACBSP bylaws require that any vacancy on the Board of Directors or on either Board of Commissioners be filled through an appointment by the Board of Directors. With the current two vacancies listed above, the Board had requested nominations and input from the membership. That process was completed in the fall and the result of the membership nomination and polling is now with the Board. The vacancies are a scheduled agenda item for the February Board meeting.

Canadian Association invites ACBSP

At the invitation of Dave Williamson, President of the Association of Canadian College Schools of Business (ACCSB), Dr. Wert attended their fall meeting in St. John's, Newfoundland, to discuss accreditation procedures and issues. ACCSB will be represented at the annual conference in Houston.

CHEA recognition prompts inquires at headquarters

As a result of CHEA's recognition of ACBSP, email queries have increased significantly. These inquires about ACBSP's mission and the accreditation process have come from individuals, other associations and quality control agencies, institutions, and from numerous sources abroad. Dr. Wert will represent ACBSP at the CHEA 2002 Annual Conference, January 21-23, and at their International Seminar, January 24.

Region VIII to hold first regional meeting

Plans are underway to hold the first International Council of Business Schools and Programs (ACBSP Region VIII) meeting in April in Paris. The meeting is being hosted by CEMHI (France), the home institution for the Region VIII President, Veronique Sournies. She is being assisted in the planning by Commissioner Hanora O'Sullivan and the Global Business Committee. We anticipate good attendance from European schools.

FIPSE work wins accolades

ACBSP has completed all of the work and submitted the final report for the FIPSE grant that made possible ACBSP's work with Black Colleges and Universities. In a letter to Dr. Wert, David Johnson of FIPSE wrote, "Through five years of extraordinary effort and service, ACBSP has assisted 15 departments and schools to full accreditation status, more than doubling the number of BCU's with this distinction. ...These are results of which ACBSP can be justly proud." Congratulations, and thanks to all of you who worked so diligently to produce such impressive results.

Best Practices in Outcomes Assessment

Most of you are probably aware that the two-year accreditation standards are being integrated with the Baldrige criteria (nineteen Baldrige item statements) for educational institutions. A key to successful Baldrige implementation is self-reflection based on accurate data. To help institutions prepare for the integrated standards, institutions are asked to identify in their Quality Assurance Reports evidence of student learning and how this evidence has been used to improve their learning environments and program offerings.

During the two-year board of commissioners fall meeting, commissioners were interested in reviewing annual reports to see how institutions have effectively used outcomes assessment methods that resulted in program enhancement and improvement through reflective analysis. The commissioners felt the assessment practices of Morehead State University (MSU) in Morehead, Kentucky were worthy of note.

At MSU the missions of the institution and business unit are linked to each program. Then, for each program, several learning outcomes are identified. For each learning outcome, several assessment methods are chosen. Each assessment method is then analyzed by measurement criteria, data collection techniques, assessment results, and finally use of results to improve instruction and learning. All of this information is summarized on a form allowing stakeholders to easily identify, by program, strengths and opportunities for improvement.

The process allows faculty to discuss assessment issues on an on-going basis so that throughout an academic year, data is gathered and analyzed, and changes are implemented. Completing the assessment report is a matter of procedure that summarizes the year's events, and not a last minute project completed in haste. Most importantly, faculty and administration use the data generated to improve the quality of the educational experience for students.

While there are many models that could be used to effectively implement an outcomes assessment program, there are at least five reasons why the model employed by MSU is worth examining: (a) it allows identification of program goals to be made at the department level while creating a linkage to the institution's vision, mission, and goals, (b) it encourages and provides incentive for faculty participation and buy-in, (c) it provides an opportunity for faculty and administration to conduct a thorough examination of program strengths and opportunities for improvement through on-going self-reflection and dialogue, (d) it integrates assessment into routine processes rather than as a discrete project, and (e) it focuses on continuous program improvement.

Kappa Beta Delta

Kappa Beta Delta's (KBD) President, Ron Davis, has announced that KBD has currently thirty chapters with an approximate membership of fourteen hundred members.

For those accredited ACBSP associate degree institutions that are interested in establishing a chapter before February 1, 2001, the Board of KBD has announced that through February 1, 2002 the one-time chapter fee has been reduced from $200 from $100. After February 1, the one-time chapter fee will revert back to $200. For further information on establishing a chapter, please call Kappa Beta Delta at 913-339-9356 or by e-mail at kbd@acbsp.org.

Associate Degree Standards

The final version of the "Integration of ACBSP Associate Degree Standards with Baldrige Criteria" will be available for download at <http://www.acbsp.org/accredit.html> no later than Friday, January 18, 2002.

The Association's bylaws require a two-thirds affirmative vote of our two-year membership in order to make changes to the standards. This voting process will be done electronically. All primary representatives will be receiving the ballot electronically sometime around January 25, 2002. The ballot should be return electronically by Friday, February 25, 2002.

The Commissioners of the Associate Degree Commission are recommending that you approve this document that integrates the current Associate Degree Standards with nineteen Baldrige item statements.

They believe that the integration will assist ACBSP institutions in the following areas:

- Guide business departments/units as they focus on systematic quality assurance measures
- Enhance the current accreditation process of ACBSP
- Stress standards without undue standardization.

If the integrated standards are approved, the time horizon for implementation will be as follows:

- For the 2001/02 Academic Year, institutions will use the standards dated March 1999.
- For the 2002/03 Academic Year, Dual Track/Transition Phase, institutions seeking initial accreditation or reaffirmation of their accreditation may use either set of standards.
- For the 2003/04 Academic Year, institutions will use the integrated standards.

BACCALAUREATE/GRADUATE DEGREE NEWS

Each year as a part of the continuous improvement process the Board of Commissioners reviews accreditation actions and procedures and identifies ways by which the process might be improved and might be made more helpful to member institutions. The Board is on track for their April meeting to consider several proposals on the accreditation and reaffirmation processes.

Non-prescriptive Review

ACBSP has taken the lead in the development of a non-prescriptive review procedure that provides institutions of higher education with a process that enables them to maintain the high academic standards required for accreditation and to enhance their responsiveness to stakeholder demands and to market supply. While this initiative has been bold in scope, it has caused some confusion among ACBSP members. Many believe that option A and option B represent two sets of standards. The fact is they represent alternative procedures that an institution may adopt to meet the single set of standards required for accreditation by ACBSP.

Although these alternative procedures appear quite different, they do share a number of important similarities, the foremost of which is the importance that both option A and option B attach to a functional assessment program that links assessment results to the decisions and operations of the business school or program. Such commonalities have resulted in the Board of Commissioners appointing a special committee, chaired by Commissioner Randy Nutter, to develop a document that details the collaboration of these two options and explores integrative concepts. The intention of this committee is not to develop a third process for seeking accreditation or to advocate the elimination of either option. Rather, the purpose is to create a document that focuses on the similarities of the two processes and identifies alternatives for implementation regarding sections many have identified as antithetical to one another. This document will be available for review and discussion at the annual meeting in Houston.

The Initial Accreditation Process

As the Board of Commissioners has analyzed the results of the accreditation process, it has noted a significant rate of deferral and a much larger number of conditions issued to programs that have not gone through the candidacy process as compared to those that have. Candidacy has been observed to yield high levels of success in obtaining accreditation, and these accreditations have been of higher quality with fewer accreditation conditions. As a result of this realization, combined with the desire that the accreditation process be both beneficial and successful, the Board of Commissioners is proposing to change the initial accreditation process. Under this proposed change, the first step in accreditation will be for a school to become a candidate for accreditation.

Entering the accreditation process by first becoming a candidate does not alter the time required to achieve accreditation. Candidacy can last from as little as a few months for schools ready to proceed to self-study, to as much as five years for those schools that need to make substantial modifications to current practices and systems. The intent of this change is to identify and solve compliance problems in advance of seeking accreditation, and thereby improving the likelihood of success of the accreditation application. This will reduce the number of accreditation deferrals and conditions, reduce the associated expenses and reduce the potential disappointment for the administration of the member school.

The Board of Commissioners wants to help member schools and programs to continuously improve and to achieve accreditation. This process will help to insure these outcomes.
