NEW ACSP RESOURCE - LAND ACKNOWLEDGEMENT STATEMENT DIRECTORY

As part of the Association of Collegiate Schools of Planning’s ongoing effort to educate our members and community on the value of diversity and inclusion, please be sure to check out the newly released ACSP Land Acknowledgement Statement Directory. This initiative continues to fulfill the mission of the Association and build a more welcoming and inclusive community. ACSP encourages those who are attending any of our events or conference sessions to use the Land Acknowledgement Statement Directory to find their appropriate land acknowledgment statement based on where they are situated.

The ACSP Land Acknowledgment Statement Directory contains formal statements that recognize and respects Native peoples as traditional stewards of lands in which ACSP member organizations and universities are situated. The statements highlight the enduring relationship between Native peoples and their traditional territories. Land acknowledgments are one way to recognize and show respect for the Indigenous people who have ties to the land where a public gathering is held. It is important to note that these land acknowledgements are just a small gesture, that should be followed by ongoing relationship-building and informed action.

This directory was compiled by The Just Places Lab at Cornell University, directed by Professor and ACSP Conference Chair Jennifer Minner, and others who have helped to contribute to the Google Document via a crowdsourcing methodology. Initial research assistance with The Just Places Lab was provided by Kelsey Coats, Anthea Fernandes, Jason Rearick, Ruweyda Salim and Dylan Stevenson.

For edits, additions or questions please email Jennifer Minner, j.minner@cornell.edu.
