JPER WRITING WORKSHOP FOR NEW SCHOLARS

Texas A&M University, July 11-13, 2021

The Journal of Planning Education and Research (JPER) and its editors will host the annual JPER Writing Workshop for New Scholars on July 11-13, 2021, by Texas A&M University. This workshop will be conducted via Zoom. We seek to improve written scholarship among new faculty of planning and related academic programs. The workshop is intended for untenured assistant professors, recent PhD recipients, or candidates graduating in spring of 2021 in urban planning, urban studies, and similar fields.

The program will include whole-group sessions on writing and publication, with intensive small-group work on participants’ own manuscripts. Selected participants must submit an article-length paper, about 25-30 double-spaced pages, by June 4, 2021. The paper will go through a mock peer review process by three referees. The reviews and feedback from faculty and other participants will help form the basis for small-group discussions during the workshop. Please direct questions on the workshop program and paper requirement to Karen Lowrie, Managing Editor (jper@acsp.org).

Applications are due April 16, 2021. Please submit to jper@acsp.org, electronically in Word or pdf, labeled with

Please combine the four documents below into one file for submission:

1. Cover letter on research interests and scholarly goals
2. Application form (see attached - page 2)
3. Current curriculum vitae
4. A recommendation letter from a department chair or dissertation advisor

We will notify successful applicants by April 30, 2021, and provide detailed information about accommodations at that time.
