

WHAT IS ACSP?

ACSP

Connecting educators, researchers and students

The Association of Collegiate Schools of Planning

(ACSP) is a consortium of more than 100 university departments and programs offering planning degrees, and another 30+ programs from within or outside the US that offer planning degrees, or programs with degrees affiliated to planning.

ACSP connects educators, researchers, and students, to advance knowledge about planning education and research. We are committed to promoting the field of planning as a diverse global community that works collectively toward healthy, equitable, and sustainable neighborhoods, cities, and regions.

Connections

APA

The American Planning Association is the not-for-profit organization for professional planners. APA and its professional institute, the American Institute of Certified Planners, are dedicated to advancing the art, science and profession of good planning — physical, economic and social — so as to create communities that offer better choices for where and how people work and live.

PAB

The PAB is jointly sponsored by ACSP, the American Planning Association, and the American Institute of Certified Planners. The PAB's mission is to ensure high quality education for future urban planners.

GPEAN

GPEAN is a network of ten associations of schools of planning worldwide with the goal of increasing mutual communication in order to improve the quality and visibility of planning and planning education.

ACSP Mission

The Association of Collegiate Schools of Planning promotes education, research, service and outreach in the United States and throughout the world by seeking to:

- recognize diverse needs and interests in planning;
- improve and enhance the accreditation process, and;
- strengthen the role of planning education in colleges and universities through publications, conferences, and community engagement;
- extend planning beyond the classroom into the world of practice.
