Philanthropic Planning through the Various Stages of a Business

Moderator: Richard Peck
Panelists: Ryan Barton, John Weeks, and Don Welch

Participants will learn from the panelists how they have leveraged philanthropic planning and tools to maximize the impact of their giving before, during, and after the sale of a (possibly family-owned) business.

- Long before the business is sold: As a means of building business value by winning the hearts and minds of employees and customers, while building goodwill in the community, via a corporate donor-advised fund
- A few years or months before the business is sold, or directly afterward in the same tax year: As a means of managing assets, minimizing taxes, and maximizing the charitable resources available for the future
- After the sale, as former owners: As a means of living a legacy by giving back to the community where the company's employees and customers lived and worked, or following the next adventure of the former business owner as it relates to giving back
Attendees can expect to:

- Learn what business owners can do now to promote philanthropy (to attract and retain employees, as well as to be “conscious capitalists” and show your authentic self/charitable mission as a company)
- Learn what business owners can do to leave a legacy (donating assets before or after a sale)
- Learn what owners might do regarding their own personal “next adventure” after the sale of the business

Opportunities for the CRT in Prenuptial and Divorce Planning

Presented by: Russell A. Willis, III, J.D., L.L.M.

By now you will have heard that the 2017 tax bill permanently repealed the alimony deduction. And you probably thought, divorce lawyers will have to do some calculations differently, maybe shift their focus to the division of property. But what has that to do with me?

If you also heard that the repeal has completely upended the tax treatment of a trust for the benefit of a former spouse, even if the trust was not intended as a substitute for alimony, you may have wondered how this might affect all these intricate transfer tax and creditor protection strategies you have sort of heard about, involving inter vivos QTIP trusts.

And then you may have asked yourself whether there might be an opportunity here for the gift planner to bring something to the table for a prospective donor who is negotiating a prenuptial agreement, or a divorce settlement, or who is simply making provision for a less wealthy spouse.

The answer is yes, there is.

The inter vivos QTIP trust has always had some vulnerabilities in the event of a divorce, and the repeal of section 682 has only exacerbated these. A charitable remainder trust for the benefit of a spouse or former spouse has always offered flexibilities the inter vivos QTIP cannot. With the repeal of section 682, the CRT may finally come into its own as a preferred vehicle for prenuptial, postnuptial, and divorce settlement planning.

Let’s talk for an hour about how we can make this happen.

Impact Investing: Friend or Foe of Fundraising?

Presented by: Philip Cubeta, CLU®, ChFC®, AEP®, MSFS, CAP®

As impact investing grows, and as advisors learn how to place impact investments with their philanthropic clients, will those clients give less to charity? Will they turn to advisors for advice on making a difference instead of fundraisers for nonprofits?
presentation, you will go beyond the basics of impact investing to consider how it may transform both the investment profession and the nonprofit sector. You will leave with insights to guide your own work whether you provide investments, give grantmaking advice, or raise donated dollars.
