Ihl{A.Elisabeth}: in 1796 daughter of {Philipp} of Zug married Goetz{Heinrich} in Schoenchen where they were living in 1798 in his parents household (Mai1798: Mv3073, Sn08).

The lands of two of them, and part of a third, lay contiguously S and SE of Frankfurt-am-Main, and the lands of two others and part of a third lay contiguously N and NE of Hanau city. Given the proclivity (as can be seen in the entries below) of clerks in Russia, both German and Russian, single term Isenburg, it might be that the five sometimes or often handled travel papers and the like jointly? Or was there insufficient knowledge of central European political geography available in Russia to enable personnel there to distinguish among these small but important countries? The Stahl-am-Karaman FSL seems to transliterate Isenburg as Idenburg or as Rissenburg. Unless otherwise noted none of the next six Isenburg entries mention which Isenburg and none mention any
