Member Spotlight
Angela Bigotti, AIA
Recipient Of the 2020 AIA Nevada Silver Medal
I Am A Member Of The American Institute Of Architects (AIA) Because... being a member in this organization is an opportunity to be a part of a group representing a force for positive change. The camaraderie of like-minded people contributes to my interest in advocating for design, raising the bar of professionalism, and positively impacting communities. AIA has made me a better leader. Through dialogue with peers, being on the Board of Directors and participating in event planning, my career is continually enriched with the opportunity to influence and most importantly to assist in pushing the profession forward.

I am the offspring of a long line of builders. I was fortunate to be exposed to construction right from the start. You might say my passion to create buildings runs through my blood. Becoming an architect felt very instinctive to me. Along with Architecture serving my interest in art, I’ve always been inspired to create buildings and memorable places. The satisfaction of starting with a program of spaces, enjoying the process of developing the ideas, and finally, seeing others enjoying the places that are built is unquestionably what drives my enthusiasm.

I am a native Nevadan and returned to practice in Reno after earning a Master’s Degree in Architecture at Arizona State University in 1991. Shortly after becoming licensed I was offered a partnership with the firm known today as Van Woert Bigotti Architects. For over 20 years my role has been to collaboratively set the vision of projects and the direction of the firm with my partner Brad Van Woert, III, AIA. We have always been fortunate to have the support of an amazing staff with tireless dedication and creativity they bring to each project. Because of the commitment of our team, our work is often acknowledged with awards for design, planning, sustainability, or historic preservation.

I enjoy the team atmosphere of design and construction and I remain focused on raising the level of discourse on design to enrich our work. It’s in the relationships I’ve built over the years that I learn the most about myself and this has enriched my career and the way I lead my life. My years of participating on the Board of Directors for the local and state Chapter(s) of AIA continue to make me aware of the power of our great organization when we are focused on the same goals.

I have 2 adult daughters and the hobbies I would mention would involve being outdoors, planning time in nature, spending time with family, and catching up in conversation with friends and colleagues.

What is the most important thing you’ve learned? To lighten up! Early in my career, being a woman in architecture had me on my toes to find my way in what was, a man’s profession. This spawned an internal competition with measuring up and a striving to never fail. Seeing the evolution of our profession towards diversity and practicing in our current generation of inclusion is a refreshing experience. Architecture can run us. It isn’t for the faint of heart. However, in the end, it is better approached as “a way of being” rather than “a way of surviving”. We don’t get awards for the duration of time spent at the office. Having learned this, I’m focusing more and more on health and creating balance. I hope to return to planning more travel when we have the pandemic behind us.

What is your favorite piece of architecture? Why? This is tough for me because some of the smallest un-publicized projects resonate with me. To single out an architect, I am impressed by Renzo Piano’s work and what he calls “beauty”; and that beauty is not just cosmetics but rather it is “discovery, light, space, compression, expansion, shadow and the sense of lightness…..”. For me, he is a master of choreographing space into a meaningful experience. The project I admire most is the Tjibaou Cultural Centre, in Noumea. His way of celebrating the Kanak culture—combining their skills and integration with nature—is exceptional. The sequence of expressive “pavilions” emphasizes the notion of placemaking through the beauty of structure and details of construction. With this project, Renzo created an iconic structure that honors culture, and integrates it to fit comfortably and sustainably in its setting. A true work of art and science to celebrate people and place.

Where will you be in 20 years? I hope to be enjoying my family, friends, and career with a zest for making a difference and contributing to others!

How do you think the profession will evolve in the next 5 - 10 years? I think we will slowly keep moving toward a more sensitive and sensible approach in the way we relate and the way we design. I believe that the evolution of our society and a focus on inclusion and diversity will inspire the profession to move away from the glamorization of the individual architect (“Starchitect”) as the world begins to value more and more how the built environment needs to serve humanity. This may finally be a time in history where we make the focus less on monuments of wealth and power and more on how we affect our interaction with resources and the well-being of people. We clearly seem stuck in our old ways, even with 20-30 years of considering sustainability as a necessary solution. Agencies, government, and the private sector will all be better to recognize this and take a powerful stand for something better. Wouldn’t it be wonderful to see the Millennial and Gen Z architects and engineers take technology to its smallest place, as Buckminster Fuller pondered, where energy systems would not be required at all? One can hope...
As we begin the month of March and Spring is almost upon us, we have another month of events and lectures planned for AIA Las Vegas. Before I talk about some of the highlights, I want to recap a couple events from February.

This past month AIA Las Vegas, along with every other chapter in our national organization, participated in Grassroots 2021: Bring it Home. This yearly event is a chance for the leaders within local chapters to meet (virtually this year) and discuss topics effecting our members and how to best provide service to our membership. This year also included a virtual Capitol Hill day where we had meetings with Nevada’s congressional delegation to discuss the important role AIA Members can play in turning our economy around by investing in Building Infrastructure and Zero Code. Leaders from AIA Las Vegas, AIA Northern Nevada and AIA Nevada spoke with Sen. Jacky Rosen, Sen. Catherine Cortez Masto, Rep. Dina Titus and Rep. Mark Amodei, all of whom spoke highly of the AIA and our profession. They each looked forward to working with us as current and new bills are introduced to ensure our voices are heard for the state of Nevada in Washington D.C.

February’s member meeting was truly the highlight of the month for me. The presentation by Michael Ford about the program he founded, The Hip Hop Architecture Camp®, was inspiring and educational. I am sure many people have heard the correlations made between architecture and music, but to hear this approach via Hip Hop music and how students today get excited about architecture was uplifting. I want to thank KME Architects for their sponsorship of the February Member meeting and for Mel Green’s dedication to the youth of the Las Vegas community. Look for further information from the AIA Las Vegas EDI Committee as they work to bring this youth camp to Las Vegas in the near future.

As we turn our focus this month to our Women in Architecture committee, I would like to provide a link to the 2020 NCARB by the Numbers report and the subsection on Demographics. (https://www.ncarb.org/nbtn2020/demographics) As you read through the report you will see that the percentage of women starting the path to licensure is increasing with women now making up 49% of those starting the NCARB program. This is great news, but the report also goes on to say though both women and people of color are underrepresented in architecture, the higher percentage starting the program is a good indication that change is happening. I encourage everyone to read through the report as our Women in Architecture committee this year will be presenting several meetings that focus on continuing to make positive change for women in our profession.

As I close, I want to highlight the AIA Las Vegas Membership meeting with speaker Monica Chadha, AIA, LEED AP on March 17th at 5:30pm (Register to attend here https://www.aialasvegas.org/events/EventDetails.aspx?id=1468011&group=) and also the UNLV Free Lecture Series with speaker Ludovico Lombardi from Zaha Hadid Architects on March 26th at 1:00pm. (Register to attend here https://www.aialasvegas.org/events/EventDetails.aspx?id=1468020&group=)

My quote this month comes from the late Zaha Hadid herself, “Your success will not be determined by your gender or ethnicity but only by the scope of your dreams.”

Sincerely,

James Horvath, AIA
MARCH MEMBER MEETING - WOMEN IN COMMUNITY LEADERSHIP
Hosted by the Women In Architecture Committee

Join us for an informative and inspiring meeting celebrating Women’s History Month. Our speaker will be Monica Chadha, AIA, Founder of Civic Projects, Chicago (www.civic-projects.com)

March is Women’s History Month, and an excellent time for AIA LV’s Women in Architecture Committee to host our March Member Meeting and offer an opportunity to discuss Women in Community Leadership. The guest speaker for the program is a Community Leader and the Founder and Principal of Architect for Civic Projects in Chicago and an Adjunct Professor at the Illinois Institute of Technology, Monica Chadha, AIA. She is a designer and educator focused on quality architecture for everyone. A prolific writer and speaker, Ms Chadha practices architecture and urban design, engaging with civic leaders and community stakeholders to help them achieve social impact goals. Though she is most notable for community engagement work, her architectural work covers exhibition spaces, affordable housing, mixed-use buildings, and civic projects, such as the Champaign Public Library, the University of Minnesota Duluth’s Civil Engineering Building, and exhibition space for the Obama Presidential Center. Ms. Chadha was the Founding Director for Impact Detroit, an interdisciplinary organization focused on community driven design initiatives; a co-founder for Converge: Exchange, a workshop and symposium dedicated to affordable housing and a featured designer in the SAY IT LOUD – Illinois Exhibition.

APRIL MEMBER MEETING - PUBLIC INTEREST ARCHITECTURE: DESIGNING A SUSTAINABLE AND EQUITABLE FUTURE - Hosted by the AIA LV COTE Committee

Public Interest Architecture and the related field of Community Based Design are growing areas of focus for large and small design firms in nearly every state in the country. Architects have always been leaders and advocates for community based projects and urban redevelopment and many firms have adopted the practice of providing pro bono or reduced fee services to projects that provide a community benefit or which otherwise serve in the Public Interest. With the social sea change in recent years that has resulted from communities of color standing up to demand real action on social equity and criminal justice system reforms it is increasingly critical that architects get involved with these issues so they can bring their uniquely collaborative talents and experience to the communities that are in the greatest need.

These same communities are also historically located in areas which are affected the most severely by the effects of climate change such as extreme heat and drought. The application of Sustainable Design strategies to buildings and urban design are particularly critical for underserved communities and communities of color which are generally less able to adapt to rising power bills and have less access to quality health care and limited housing options that are affordable and close to jobs and transportation. This presentation will address the important role that architects have played in how this role must be expanded to get the design community much more involved in policy development around sustainability, urban design and affordable housing.

Save The Date! This program will be held via zoom on Wednesday, April 21st, 2021 at 5:30PM PST
This program will be registered for 1.5 AIA CELUs.

MAY MEMBER MEETING
AIA LAS VEGAS VIRTUAL HIGH SCHOOL DESIGN AWARDS
Hosted by the AIA Las Vegas Education Outreach Committee

Look into the future and experience the expectation of the profession!

2021 Project Description:
Design a Community/Recreation Center as a part of a larger sports and recreation complex in Summerlin. Las Vegas is quickly becoming a sports town. With the eruption in popularity of the Vegas Golden Knights and the reinvention of Vegas' own Minor League Baseball team, the Aviators, other sports franchises—like the Las Vegas Raiders—are following suit. Large facilities have been constructed across the valley to accommodate. When not in use, these facilities tend to open their doors for other community functions. This year’s design program once again focuses on the development of an area east of City National Arena and the Las Vegas Ballpark that pulls from the uses offered by these facilities and augments the area with functions not currently provided. In addition, the American Institute of Architects’ Strategic Plan is highly focused on Climate Change and Climate Action. Students will be required to design within the AIA’s “Framework for Design Excellence.”

The Online Program is scheduled for Wednesday, May 19th at 5:30pm PST via ZOOM. Please register here to receive the link to attend.

Hi Everyone,

I want to give you all an update on what is happening with the St. Baldrick’s Bald By Design Team this year. If you are interested in participating, you have three options to choose from. No matter which option you pick, we will support you, and do what we can to help you achieve your goals. So read on to the end!

Last year we were lucky to have had our event about 10 days before the state shut down. This year, not so lucky. The McMullans have elected to postpone the event at the pub, at which our team would normally shave, until Sept 18. They felt they could not adequately plan their event with any certainty, which appears to be a good decision. Obviously, your first option is to wait until the McMullan’s event in Sept to participate.

Your second option is to shave (or cut a pony tail) virtually. This can be done on your own, or with others. If you choose this option, let me know and we can have the Foundation staff help with your execution and links for fundraising. They also can help make sure it is recorded. Then perhaps it can be assembled with other virtual shaves to create a collage.

Your third option is currently being formulated. The Lifeguard Arena in downtown Henderson has been completed and is open to the public. They are in the process of completing construction of their outdoor event plaza. I met last week with the Event Coordinator responsible for programming events in the plaza. They expect to complete construction in April, and are programming events after that. Our discussion centered around possibly doing an outdoor event in the plaza area in May or June. This would provide a few advantages to continue covid precautions. As we would only be doing the event for the Bald By Design Team, the quantity of attendees would be significantly fewer than at McMullans. We believe we can accomplish distancing while conducting the event. Details are being developed, and more will be shared as it develops. But for now, this is the third option.

I know this is a challenging time for these types of events. I encourage you to sign up and link to the Bald By Design team. You can start fundraising anytime while being flexible on the date of the shave. Please consider doing something, as the need for research continues!

If you have questions or comments or preferences for options, please feel free to email me at phil.ralston@anclv.com. No matter which option you pick, your shave will be part of our Team effort!

Thanks,
Phil

AIA NEVADA MEMBERS ARE INTERVIEWED FOR A NEVADA BUSINESS PRESS ARTICLE

"Time & Space – Architectural Design Trends" by John Seelmeyer

Architecture may be all about space — the creation of spaces, the blending of the built environment with the natural environment — but it’s often about time, too. As Nevada’s architectural professionals look forward to the evolution of design trends in 2021, they see lots of indications that the dramatically changing times in which we find ourselves will shape the buildings in which we live our lives. From reimagined retail outlets and glittering resort casinos to offices that emphasize employee safety and workday facilities for the Department of Motor Vehicles, effects of the COVID-19 pandemic and the speeded-up transition to online shopping and online workplaces make themselves felt as architects meet with their clients.

On Friday, March 5th and 12th, The American Institute of Architects Los Angeles’s Committee on the Environment (AIA LA COTE) will be presenting the 4th annual 1.5°C Symposium on Climate Change. The symposium has been renamed “1.5 Degrees Celsius” from 2 Degrees Celsius to highlight the global urgent need for the design and construction industry to provide carbon mitigating solutions that will prevent the global temperature from rising more than 1.5 degrees above pre-industrial levels.

AIA LA COTE is providing a conference that reflects the most relevant dialogues in society and has incorporated this thinking into a two-day symposium around Climate Action and Climate Justice. Carbon Neutrality, Healthy Building Environments, Resiliency, and Equity are a few of the topics to be presented by a diverse set of presenters including such keynotes as Farhana Yamin; an international environmental lawyer and activist who has co-authored a number of international treaties on climate change, including the Paris Climate Agreement.

Clearly it’s not impossible to do nothing. This guy is proof. But there are those who actually do the impossible.

In 1895, heavier than air flight was impossible: then the Wright Brothers showed up on a beach at Kitty Hawk. A sub-4 minute mile was impossible until Roger Bannister proved otherwise in 1954. In 1926, Philo Farnsworth’s television invention was dismissed as financially impossible and a waste of time. Edison’s electric light bulb was described as a conspicuous failure, critics claimed the horseless carriage would never come into common use, and in 1949 it was claimed that we had reached the limits of what was possible to achieve with computer technology. In the words of Nelson Mandela, “It always seems impossible until it’s done.”
