Member Spotlight
Mark McGinty, Assoc. AIA
I Am A Member Of The American Institute Of Architects (AIA) Because... I believe this is the forum to support the growth of the profession in Nevada. AIA allows one on one interactions between senior and young professionals in both casual and formal learning environments giving both groups a wider, varied look at architecture.

After 38 years in the architecture and construction industries here in Nevada, I have worked on many project types i.e. retail, custom homes and hospitality. My passion now, (at least for the last 21 years) has been educational and not-for-profit projects because they have such an important role to play in our communities. City Redevelopment Zones are another passion I share with many of my peers and I’m currently in my 14th year on the Henderson Redevelopment Commission. When I’m not practicing the profession, my wife of 33 years and I spend our time remodeling our home, off-roading and camping.

What is the most important thing you’ve learned?  Be a good listener, Listen to your client, your staff, your business partners

Where will you be in 20 years?  Retired and enjoying grandchildren

How do you think the profession will evolve in the next 5-10 years?  Material Science has to evolve to address the 2030 challenge and Virtual Design will become common place in the act of producing construction documents.

If you were to change one thing about our profession today what would it be?  Bring back Professional Courtesy. Remember when we would call each other upon the recognition of another professionals title blocks in our office- prior to giving that new client a fee proposal? You all Remember.
This month marks the 157th anniversary of Nevada, a day Nevadans celebrate as the only state to observe its Admission into the Union on October 31, 1864. I recall when I moved to Las Vegas 16 years ago, I didn’t know anything about the holiday or our State, but I have grown to love this place and it is home. Of course, as I met people who grew up in Las Vegas, they said the best part of the holiday was how it coincided with Halloween and getting candy as kids. This year, I know many are looking forward to celebrating both.

In September, AIA Las Vegas had an active month with our “Learn About/Turn About” Product Show taking place on September 17th at the Westgate Resort. I had the pleasure to talk with many of our AIA, Allied and Associate members that day at both the lunch and during the product show. Everyone I spoke with enjoyed the opportunity to have the show again as well as spending time together. I know several vendors had new products to share with our architectural community and this gave them the chance to present them. If your firm is looking for CE credits or wanting to do in office presentations, reach out to your product representatives as many are eager to get back in front of us to share new information with us.

Also, this past month, Carlos Fernandez our AIA Nevada/AIA Las Vegas Executive Director attended the 2021 Vegas Chamber D.C. Fly-In where he represented our membership at various functions and met with our representatives at different levels of government. Increasing the presence of AIA Las Vegas in government affairs has been one of our chapter’s strategic planning goals and Carlos has been critical at moving our chapter forward in this direction.

As I write this month’s message, I am preparing to head to our regional conference of Western Mountain Region at the WMR 21 Summit in Albuquerque, New Mexico. This conference will be the last in this form as regions were dissolved by a vote taken at our June A’21 AIA Business Meeting. Next month I will have an update from the conference as the business meeting will discuss how to continue the network and comradery moving forward.

As I searched for a quote this month to end my message, I came across this one from Yoshio Taniguchi who was born in Tokyo, Japan in 1937. One of his notable architectural works has been the early 21st century expansion of the Museum of Modern Art (MoMA) in New York City. I end this month with his description of how he views a building regarding its function. “Architecture is basically a container of something. I hope they will enjoy not so much the teacup, but the tea.” – Yoshio Taniguchi

Bald by Design Team exceeds goal!

For over 10 years the southern Nevada chapter of the AIA has sponsored the Bald by Design head shave team in support of the St. Baldrick’s Foundation. The pandemic caused a great lull in donations supporting pediatric cancer research, and delayed our 2021 event by 6 months. But with your help and support, our team was able to raise over $114,000 at this year’s event on September 18. We had 21 team members from many areas in our community. This was our second highest fundraising year, which allowed us to break the $1 million mark for the Bald by Design team fundraising history!!

LOCAL WOMEN ARCHITECTS FEATURED IN "THE CREDENTIAL" reprinted from the August 2021 Issue of "The Credential" by LS Credentialing Services, LLC

This month and next we’re talking with professional women practicing architecture, engineering, as well as skilled managers of major commercial construction projects about the potential for a looming shortage of talent in the industry. The spark for this topic was "Coffee with an Architect" a virtual event in January 2021 hosted by AIA Las Vegas, at which Eric Roberts, AIA, CEO of Knit Studios said this is one of the most important issues firms are currently facing.

Eric encouraged "The Credential" to obtain input from women in the industry, who in 2020 made up only 16.5 percent of architecture and engineering professions as a whole and only 28.2 percent of architects, and a mere 10.9 of the construction industry according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. A total of seven women lent an invaluable perspective. In fact, their responses were so thoughtful and engaging that we've made this a two-part series, featuring Part 1 this month and Part 2 next month. Their answers have been edited for brevity, but are still impactful.

CLICK HERE to read the rest of Part 1 and to learn what these professionals see trending in the industry when it comes to attracting and retaining talent.

Part 2: "What The Future Holds For Talent In Architecture and Engineering" reprinted from the September 2021 Issue of "The Credential" by LS Credentialing Services, LLC

This month, we continue our conversation with professional women in architecture, engineering and construction about the probability for a looming shortage of talent in the industry. This month’s focus is potential obstacles to attracting and retaining dedicated professionals.

During the pandemic, a widespread understanding that connecting to nature is an essential part of a healthy human condition has been brought to light. For many, parks and other outdoor environments served as the go to place for mental and social healing to occur. However, many cities have not been designed to provide these experiences to all people, especially those in underserved areas. Therefore, the question becomes what can designers, academics, and policy makers do to provide equitable urban communities.

Join us October 21st at 4:00pm for our next LGA Fireside Chat where we will discuss these ideas and more with Alden Stoner, CEO of Nature Sacred and Angela Loder, PhD. Vice President of Research at Well Building Institute and author of Small-Scale Urban Greening, Creating Places of Health, Creativity, and Ecological Sustainability.

STANTON SOUTHWICK, PLA
SLA Land Architects, President/Owner

WHAT DO YOU DO?
I have been a landscape architect for over 30 years and have been asked a hundred times what I do for a living. When I say that I am a landscape architect, their eyes glaze over and a questioning look forms on their face. The next question is either, “Can you help me plant a tree in my yard?” or “How can you stand working out in this heat?”. It seems that the only part of “landscape architect” they hear is “landscape” and then they add an “r” to the end. Just to clarify, a “landscape architect” designs the land and all associated amenities. A “landscaper” installs what we design.

For the last 21 years, our firm has done business as “Southwick Landscape Architects”. To help better identify what it is we do, we have modified our name. As of September 1st, 2021, our firm will be known as “SLA Land Architects”. We are architects of the land and want to emphasize that point. No one has purchased the firm, no employees have left, there will be no change in daily operations. We just want the name to better reflect what we do.

Our website will change to www.slalandarchitects.com and email addresses will change to (name)@slalandarchitects.com. We know it is an inconvenience, but we ask that you update our contact information.

We look forward to the next 20 years and we IMAGINE innovative possibilities and DESIGN inspiring spaces for the physical and social environment, making our world a more enjoyable place to LIVE.

AIA LAS VEGAS EDUCATIONAL OUTREACH COMMITTEE
John O. Torpey, AIA
Chair

COVID 19 is still having a major impact on how schools and our local AIA are operating this year. Our committee meetings will be a hybrid mode for the foreseeable future with attendance being a combination on-line and in person at the AIA office. The contacts with Clark County School District that I’ve made this year have also been a hybrid, with meetings using in person and on-line.

An early contact with CCSD this year has been Craig Brockett, M.A.Ed. with CCSD. He serves as CCSD’s Work Based Learning Coordinator and has introduced me to several faculty contacts within CCSD that range from Elementary, Middle School and High School programs. It’s a process in reaching out and contacting these schools and faculty. I’m impressed with what I’ve seen so far and am looking forward to developing programs that we can bring to these schools. I’ve made a very exciting tour at Lied STEM Academy (Middle School) and have attended their Architecture and Construction Management (ACT) Committee meeting recently. They are interested in speakers, mentors, site visits and career days.

Our first Career Fair endeavor this year will be October 15, 2021 at CSN North Las Vegas Campus. We are joining with Melvin Green, AIA at this showcase with myself and Stacey Hatfield (NSBAIDRD). This event is for middle and high school students to have the opportunity to learn about the variety of careers in our local community. We’re looking forward to participating in this and to future events this year.

WIA PLANNING SESSION

We would like to thank all of the people who attended our Women in Architecture meetings this year. We had some amazing conversations and met many wonderful women doing amazing work in Nevada. Our final meeting for the year is coming up and we would like to invite everyone to come and help plan the course of the committee for next year. That’s right, we are only having one more meeting this year so you will want to be there! We will be reviewing the discussions held in 2021 and deciding what topics to cover in our panel discussions for 2022. This meeting will be a hybrid in-person/virtual meeting and for those attending in real life, snacks and drinks will be provided. We hope to see you all there.

When: Tuesday, October 26th at 4:00pm PST.

Symposium Summary:
Over the last two decades, public space renewal in downtown Detroit has undergone phases of experiments in response to emerging phenomena that put pressure on existing governance models. This includes most notably “metropolitanization,” referring to increasing geographical scales of interdependence in conjunction with the stalemate coming from partisan bickering and shrinking subsidies that negatively impact the provision of public services at local levels. New public space governance models based on partnerships have emerged in Detroit and elsewhere in the world. in response to the need to reimagine urban identities, which are critical in ensuring global competitiveness. The introduction of business improvement districts (BIDS) has been key in creating an armature for diversifying the principle urban actors and financing sources involved in public space renewal and creation. BIDs are therefore an interesting case study for investigating the potentials and limits of governance model shifts in the renewal of downtown public spaces.

This call for proposals is soliciting contributions from public space researchers, professionals and designers to participate in a one-day symposium that will take place in Detroit, Michigan on March 25, 2022. Through presentations and lightning talks the symposium will share knowledge and discuss best practices and innovative ideas for central public space governance, programming, and design within business improvement districts/zones/areas. Additionally, the symposium will help identify the historic influences that have shaped the current trend of public-private public realm development in downtowns. The gathering will create a space for exploring:

- How have new governance models of public space shifted the development process and shaped the design and programming of public space?
- How are public space development decisions made regarding programming and design?
- What are best practices cities and organizations should adopt to ensure the continued fair and just availability of public space to all?

Schedule:
Call for proposals opens: August 30, 2021
Deadline for proposals: October 8, 2021
Announcement of decisions: November 15, 2021
Submission of presentations: March 18, 2022
Symposium: March 25, 2022

YISELLE SANTOS RIVERA, AIA

For Yiselle Santos Rivera, the idea that advocacy and architecture are inseparable came early. The University of Puerto Rico, where Santos Rivera completed her undergraduate degree in environmental science and design, is embedded in one of San Juan’s most storied neighborhoods and has been the site of numerous protests. The architecture professors talked openly about their own histories of activism, and they taught students to view architecture not as a mere act of building, but as a profession that promotes human dignity, a strong culture, and resilient communities. Today, Santos Rivera is a published author, national speaker, and thought leader who is creating positive change by empowering the next generation of architects to find innovative solutions that create a more resilient, equitable, and inclusive future for all.
