

J. RICHARD TROLL MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIP FUND

2019-2020 Academic Year

Completing this application will allow you to be considered for the J. Richard Troll Memorial Scholarship, an annual scholarship awarded to three undergraduate-level college or university students and one graduate student of exceptional quality, who are majoring in packaging engineering or a related packaging field.

Who was J. Richard Troll?

J. Richard “Dick” Troll was a founder, past president, and chairman of the Association of Independent Corrugated Converters (AICC), an international trade association representing the independent sector of the corrugated packaging industry. He was an established leader, having lived in the corrugated paper and packaging industry and fully able to understand the box plant owner’s concerns.

Dick was also the founder of the International Corrugated Packaging Foundation (ICPF), the corrugated packaging industry’s educational foundation that was established in 1985 and is dedicated to improving corrugated industry education for students studying packaging in universities, technical colleges, and trade schools.

Dick was passionate about education for those already in the corrugated paper industry, but more importantly, for young people in colleges, universities, and schools. He loved the corrugated industry—which is the largest segment of the entire packaging industry—and recognized its potential. He saw corrugated, and rightly so, as the industry offering more career opportunities and more ways to achieve one’s personal and professional fulfillment. His dream was always that those studying packaging would want to apply their talents to corrugated packaging. And so, the trustees of the J. Richard Troll Memorial Fund established this scholarship to help exemplary packaging students achieve scholastic and professional success.

Dick Troll passed away in December 1996, but his memory and his dream live on in The J. Richard Troll Memorial Scholarship.
