HISTORY
The Alaska Chiropractic Society (ACS) maintains an active role in chiropractic issues critical to the practices within the state. The society has been the voice for the chiropractic profession in the state of Alaska since its inception in 1971 by Dr. Keith E. Godfrey, Dr. Adrian Barber and Dr. Trevor Ireland. The Society was formally organized by 1974 and is a non-profit organization.

Organized chiropractic in the state maintains a powerful presence in the Legislature, sets ethical standards for the profession, develops and supports services for those lacking chiropractic health care, and demands lifelong learning to perpetuate professional excellence.
