Dear Premier Ford, Minister Jones, and Minister Fullerton:

RE: Food Insecurity in Ontario

On behalf of the Board of Health (Board) and staff of the North Bay Parry Sound District Health Unit (Health Unit), we are expressing our concerns about the high rates of food insecurity in Ontario. Most recent estimates show that one in six households experience food insecurity, and one in five children live in a food insecure household. This is not acceptable. The magnitude of the problem, paired with the severe health consequences associated with experiencing food insecurity, make this an important and pressing public health issue that requires attention from all levels of government.

Food insecurity means a household has inadequate or insecure access to food due to financial constraints. Not being able to afford food has profound adverse effects on people’s physical and mental health, and their ability to lead productive lives. The health consequences of food insecurity are also a large burden on our healthcare system.

As per the Ontario Public Health Standards, health units are required to monitor food affordability. We recently released our local 2022 Cost of Eating Well report, which draws attention to the inadequacy of current social assistance rates. It highlights that households with social assistance as their main income do not have enough money for the costs of living, including food. An excerpt from the report is included as Appendix A. It is important to note the scenarios presented include very modest estimates of both food costs and rent. Local data from the Canadian Mortgage and Housing Corporation is used for rent estimates which may or may not include utilities. Food costs are based on the Nutritious Food Basket (NFB). Grocery stores are surveyed locally to determine the cost of the NFB, which provides an estimate of the cost of following Canada’s Food Guide. Examining food costs and rent rates alongside household income scenarios determines if food is affordable. For those receiving social assistance, it is clear they do not have enough money for the costs of living.

As record high food inflation rates persist, there is no doubt the financial situation is increasingly dire for these households. While the Ontario Disability Support Program (ODSP) was increased by 5% in 2022 and will be indexed to inflation going forward, the current rates are not based on the costs of living. Further, Ontario Works (OW) has not been increased since 2018 and is not indexed to inflation.

Last week, our Board passed a series of motions demonstrating collective support from Health Unit staff, leadership, and Board members, to call on the province for income-based policy action to reduce food insecurity. The complete list of resolutions and motions are attached as Appendix B. To summarize, our Board is urging the Province of Ontario to:

- Legislate targets for the reduction of food insecurity as part of the Ontario Poverty Reduction Strategy.
- Increase social assistance rates to reflect the costs of living, and to index Ontario Works rates to inflation going forward.
- Resume investigating the feasibility of creating a guaranteed living wage (basic income) in the Province of Ontario.

Income is an important social determinant of health (SDOH) that greatly impacts other SDOHs, including food security. Income support programs are recognized globally as important and effective population health interventions, meaning they can impact the health of the whole population. Ensuring low-income households have enough money to meet their basic needs is essential for health.

Food insecurity in Canada is a persistent and highly prevalent problem that has not improved since systematic monitoring began in 2005. Our Health Unit has been vocal in the past about the importance of adequate income to reduce food insecurity. Most recently, we called on the federal government to consider the importance of a basic income program for all in light of COVID-19 pandemic response benefits, and we called on the province to establish a Social Assistance Research Commission to advise on strengthening social assistance in Ontario. We will continue to monitor food affordability and follow the evidence on this issue, as health units are required to ‘assess and report on the health of local populations describing the existence and impact of health inequities and identifying effective strategies that decrease health inequities.’

The Province of Ontario holds the power to reduce food insecurity and extreme poverty among households receiving social assistance. From a public health perspective, our Board urges you to take action. Please consider the motions our Board passed on this important issue and thank you for reviewing this information.

Sincerely yours,

Rick Champagne

Single man receiving Ontario Works

This person does not have enough money to cover rent and food in a month, or their other costs of living. Current social assistance rates in Ontario are not based on the real costs of living. There are few income supports in place for working aged adults without children, leaving them in extreme poverty should they be unemployed.

*Income is based on OW basic allowance and maximum shelter allowance, GST/HST credit, Ontario Trillium Benefit, and the Ontario Climate Action Incentive Payment.

Single woman with 2 kids receiving Ontario Works

It is highly unlikely that the $688 remaining after paying for rent and food will be enough to cover this family’s monthly expenses. Parents in Canada are eligible for the Canada/Ontario Child Benefit (CCB), which provides a seemingly significant amount of money monthly for low-income households. Yet, 1 in 5 children in Ontario live in a food insecure household, suggesting the CCB does not provide enough money to protect against food insecurity.

*Income is based on Ontario Works basic allowance for one recipient and two dependents and maximum shelter allowance for a family size of three, Canada and Ontario Child Benefit, GST/HST credit, Ontario Trillium Benefit, and the Climate Action Incentive Payment.
