The objective of this document is to provide ANDE members with a set of guidelines for MBA internship programs and to introduce ANDE’s role as an MBA Intern Hub.

Complementary Objectives

+ Compile best practices and recommendations from members with existing intern programs through telephone interviews and review of guidelines developed for other industries.

+ Share these with members who do not currently have programs.

+ Enable ANDE members to list internship opportunities on the ANDE website.

+ Distribute this information to the top business schools and Net Impact.

+ Create an initial listing of MBA intern opportunities on the ANDE website.

+ Foster a community that points applicants to opportunities with organizations in the SGB sector.
Thank you to those member organizations who shared their current practices for this project

Interviewed Organizations

And special thanks to Andrés Satizabal, MBA Candidate, NYU Stern School of Business, Class of 2011, for compiling these guidelines and making this pilot possible.

   - Define main goals of an internship program
   - Assess resource availability

2. Define Staffing Requirements
   - Identify staffing needs
   - Evaluate MBA intern vs. other staffing sources
   - Determine type of internship involvement
   - Assess logistical, financial, and legal feasibility

3. Recruit Interns
   - Define job description
   - Communicate offering
   - Receive and screen resumés
   - Interview and check references
   - Communicate decisions

4. Manage Interns
   - Take care of logistics and legal processes
   - Conduct expectations meeting
   - Define goals and deliverables
   - Train and orientate interns
   - Supervise intern
   - Ensure knowledge transfer
   - Conduct feedback sessions for interns
   - Evaluate cost-benefit vs. other staffing sources
   - Define and implement corrective actions to improve the program

5. Review Program
   - Harvest feedback from interns, managers, and other parties
   - Conduct benchmark analysis (based on previous years or comparable organizations)

The first step to developing a successful MBA internship program is to understand and articulate the goals the organization is trying to attain.

Main Goals of an MBA Internship Program

Staffing
- Source highly motivated professionals
- Free up full time staff time for ongoing projects while also bringing new perspectives to old challenges
- Outsource discrete projects – needs analysis, market research, financial analysis, etc.
- Provide leverage for scarce field staff to pursue more creative projects + expand methodologies

Recruiting
- Build and maintain relations with renowned institutions which will then provide additional resources to the organization
- Develop a network of ambassadors for summer internships and full time recruiting
- Proven, cost-effective way to recruit and evaluate potential future full time employees
- Expose new talent to the SGB sector

Marketing
- Influence the expansion of SGB support and innovative models
- Encourage people’s interest in the sector – although opportunities are limited, giving people the chance to experience the sector will maintain their interest
- Position the organization as a relevant player within the social enterprise space
- Develop networks for the industry or the market – encouraging people to identify opportunities in specific markets (e.g. Tanzania), or industries (e.g. value chain development)

Once the goals are defined, the organization needs to evaluate if it has the required resources to start and manage an MBA Internship program.

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Cost</th>
<th>Examples</th>
<th>Range</th>
<th>Recommendation for ANDE members</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Upfront recruiting and training costs | - School fees
- Outsourcing fees
- Travelling (staff or prospects)
- Materials, food, event invitations
- Training programs | $1,000 - $5,000 (per intern) | These costs are unavoidable: the recruiting process requires sufficient time and resources in order to find and train an intern that will fit the organization. However, it is possible to keep these costs at a low by using online tools (such as the new ANDE intern hub) to recruit, instead of traditional in person recruiting events. |
| Salary / stipends             | - Weekly salary
- Taxes + additional benefits | $0 - $1,500 (per intern per week) | These costs are avoidable: often MBA students are willing to work for a reduced salary, or even free, in organizations that give them interesting exposure to the social enterprise space – also, some business schools (e.g. Harvard, Columbia) provide a stipend to students pursuing careers in the sector |
| Travelling / relocation        | - Air fare, ground transportation
- Hotel / housing fees
- Food
- Work space - miscellaneous | $0 - $3,000 (per intern) | These costs are avoidable: some business schools are willing to subsidize them. However this type of cost will provide a clear message that the organization is willing to invest in the intern, even if the resources to pay a salary are unavailable |
| Variable costs                | - Incentives
- Bonuses | $0 - $2,000 (per intern) | Although variable compensation won’t be relevant for interns in the foreseeable future, there may be travelling incentives (for example a visit to headquarters, or a visit to a particular location) for interns that could increase motivation |
| Overhead opportunity costs    | - Supervisors’ time
- Program managers’ time | $300 - $500 (per intern per week) | These costs are sunk in most organizations, but the managing directors must be aware and willing to provide resources for intern supervision. Since many organizations are understaffed, this constitutes a heavy burden on the field resources and is one of the main components of the internship cost benefit analysis |
| Estimated Total               | | $4,000 - $30,000 (per intern) | NOTE: THESE ARE INDUSTRY AVERAGES, BUT THE COSTS ARE GENERALLY LOWER FOR INTERNSHIPS IN THIS SECTOR, AS MANY MBA’S ARE WILLING TO WORK FOR REDUCED SALARIES OR CAN GET ADDITIONAL SUPPORT FROM THEIR PROGRAMS |

Note: Estimate based on Interviews and benchmarks provided by “Hiring the Best and the Brightest”; overhead opportunity costs consider 4 hours per week devoted to the intern by a supervisor costing 150k per year to the organization (or equivalent FTE’s)

Once the position and the costs are clear, the program coordinator needs to develop the job description for the internship positions.

Jan 2010
Depending on each business school’s process, the resumé reception could take between 2 weeks and 3 months – the selection of the interns follows a typical recruiting process.

1. Receive and screen resumés
   - Receive resumés in a central repository
   - Sort duplicate applications (it’s best to ask candidates to only apply to one position through one channel)
   - Screen to ensure candidates meet minimum requirements (e.g. Language, type of degree, etc)

2. Filter candidates
   - Filter candidates so that there are 5-7 top applicants for each position
   - Send candidates to direct manager for phone interviewing

3. Interview candidates
   - Interview candidates by phone
   - One option is to assign candidates a specific task (for example market research of an industry in a country) to be turned in as part of the recruiting process
   - Preferably 2 people should interview the candidate

4. Communicate decisions
   - Extend offers
   - Let other candidates know they have not been selected – however, it may be a good idea to keep an alternative candidate on hold until all the offers have been accepted

5. Negotiate and finalize
   - Internship offering acceptance yields vary from 25% to 50% (for more traditional industries) so expect negotiation and be willing to compromise

The main priority after solving all the logistics and legal issues for the intern is to conduct a thorough orientation and training.

Key Elements to Include in the Orientation

- Company structure and organization
- Description of the social enterprise space
- Special industry jargon
- Specific work standards and procedures
- Reporting relationships
- Access to the supervisor (days, times, and duration)
- Tasks that can be completed without supervisory approval
- Work processing requests and timeliness
- Mail and telephone systems
- Approved form(s) for correspondence
- Safety regulations
- Procedure for signing off completed work
- Periodic forms or reports to be completed
- Security and confidentiality issues, if relevant
- Acceptable dress and appearance
- Maintaining the premises and work station
- Available resources within the organization
- Deliverables expected from the intern and criteria for quality
- How the organization wants the intern to deal with clients, customers, and vendors

Good intern supervision will ensure the success of the internship program – ANDE members recommend at least a weekly meeting / interaction with the intern

Key Elements of Supervisor Interaction

+ Review the work done by the intern
  — Ensure the activities are being executed on time
  — Ensure the intern has enough to do and is staying engaged
  — Provide timely feedback to the intern on the quality of the job done
  — Recommend resources to fulfill performance gaps (e.g. books to read, workshops to attend, people to look as reference)

+ Explain new tasks to be executed
  — Provide detailed explanation (even if work seems trivial)
  — Explain relevance of the task - how the work fits into the “big picture
  — Ensure understanding by the intern
  — Ask for additional ideas on the tasks to be executed

+ Define an action plan for the following week
  — Prioritize tasks and activities
  — Align performance expectations

+ Motivate the intern
  — Give positive feedback on exceptional contributions
  — Include the intern in other activities as an observer or passive participant (staff meetings, board meetings)
  — Invite the intern to join informal interactions (lunches, events)

Source: Interviews with ANDE members, Key Elements extracted from Technology Council of Pennsylvania Page 12
When the internship ends, two activities are critical: ensuring knowledge transfer and conducting a feedback session.

Critical Activities Upon Exit

+ Ensure knowledge transfer
  — Transfer all documents managed by the intern to a central information repository
  — Ensure all relevant documents are transferred to people at the organization
  — Get the intern to coach organization members on the usage of financial models and other analytical tools used or created during the internship

+ Give feedback to the intern
  — Assess intern performance
  — Compare performance to benchmark performances by peers and/or other members of the organization
  — Identify strengths and weaknesses
  — Communicate feedback and give recommendations

+ Receive feedback from the intern
  — Ask for detailed feedback on the internship program (recruiting, orientation, work content, supervision, use of time, overall learning from the sector)
  — Request constructive feedback for the organization

Source: Interviews with ANDE members, Grassroots Business Fund Exit Interview Form
Finally, every organization must evaluate the return of their internship program and determine actions to improve it – this is done through a yearly review process.

Internship Program Review Process

- Harvest feedback
  - What do current interns, managers, clients, and universities think about the program?

- Define and implement corrective actions
  - How can we improve our internship program?
  - Who will be responsible for executing those actions?
  - Who will lead and monitor the progress?
  - Should we continue the program?

- Conduct benchmark analysis
  - How does this evaluation compare with previous years or other organizations?

- Evaluate cost-benefit vs. other staffing sources
  - How much did our internship program cost?
  - Did the added value provide sufficient ROI?
  - What other options could be more cost effective?
