ENTREPRENEURS ARE WORKING TO END POVERTY IN EMERGING MARKETS. HERE’S HOW ANDE HELPS:

SGBS: DRIVING PROSPERITY IN DEVELOPING COUNTRIES

As the global community embraces the UN Sustainable Development Goals, it is critical to leverage small and growing businesses (SGBs) as a key tool in attaining the goals. Aspen Network of Development Entrepreneurs (ANDE) members share the view that targeted support for SGB entrepreneurs is crucial to unlocking sustainable economic growth. SGBs represent locally-driven solutions that, in the right environment, are self-sustaining and create jobs that help people climb — and stay — out of poverty. These entrepreneurs are also often working to create a world that is cleaner, healthier, and more inclusive and equitable for all.

There is no silver bullet to fighting poverty. However, the value of SGBs should not be overlooked. Successfully supporting SGBs requires cultivating entrepreneurial ecosystems throughout emerging markets. ANDE is dedicated to doing just that by building a thriving network of people and organizations and supporting them through policy and program initiatives.

AN EXPANDING GLOBAL NETWORK

Launched in 2009 with 34 members, ANDE now comprises more than 280 active members working in more than 150 countries, while supporting tens of thousands of small business entrepreneurs.

The ANDE membership reflects the full ecosystem that supports SGBs in emerging markets, including banks, capacity development providers, corporations, development financial institutions, donor agencies, foundations, investors, and research.

ANDE’S UNIQUE VALUE

The breadth and depth of the ANDE network allow us to connect local experts with decision makers through our eight regional chapters and global headquarters in Washington, DC. Chapters focus on building strong regional connections and fostering collaborative initiatives to improve national business environments.

Our global staff advocate for the sector with the philanthropic and investor communities. They also design and implement research projects, training workshops, and other programming to push the sector forward and connect our members across geographic and subject areas. In the ANDE network, diverse experts learn from one another in a setting that values both innovation and implementation. Building prosperity in emerging markets requires both.

OUR PROGRAM AREAS INCLUDE:
Advocacy & Education • Funding Opportunities & Resources • Knowledge Sharing & Networking
Metrics & Evaluation • Research • Training & Talent Development
