LETTER FROM THE SECRETARY-TREASURER

To All Members of the Association:

The one hundred and fourth Annual Meeting of the Eastern Division will be held from Thursday, December 27th through Sunday, December 30th, 2007, at the Marriott Waterfront Hotel, Baltimore, and neighboring hotels. All program sessions, as well as the book exhibits and the large evening receptions, will take place at the Marriott Waterfront. Hotel accommodations at convention rates are available at the Marriott Waterfront, the Marriott Courtyard Hotel, Pier V Hotel, the Hilton Garden Inn/Homewood Suites, and the Renaissance Harborplace Hotel. (The rates vary slightly from one hotel to another, but in all cases are below the rates at the last two Eastern Division meetings.) Some interview tables will be at the Pier V Hotel and the Renaissance Harborplace. There will also be interview suites at all of these hotels.

The Marriott Courtyard, Pier V Hotel, and Hilton Garden Inn/Homewood Suites are all within two blocks of the Marriott Waterfront. The Renaissance Harborplace is further, but still an easy 15-minute walk from the Marriott Waterfront; a fast walker can cover the distance in just over 10 minutes (crede experto). There will also be a free water taxi service during daytime hours between the Renaissance Harborplace and the Marriott Waterfront. At the back of the program, along with the usual meeting room floor plans, is a map showing the locations of the various hotels. I suggest that you make reservations at your earliest convenience. (Please Note: Suite reservations for interviewers are handled through Linda Smallbrook at the National Office; see the Hotel Suite Information page at the end of the program, along with the regular hotel reservation and registration forms.)

This issue of the Proceedings contains the following items:

- (1) The complete program, including the program for group meetings.
- (2) An advance registration form for individuals.
- (3) An advance registration form for departments planning to interview candidates at the meeting and wishing to use the APA Placement Service.
- (4) Forms for room reservations and room reservations at student rates.
- (5) A table reservation form for the receptions.

Additional copies of the full program will be available at the Registration Desk.

Please Note: It is expected that by the time you read this, meeting registration, Placement Service registration for departments, and reception table reservation (in other words, the operations corresponding to items (2), (3) and (5) above) will also be available online on the APA web site. Please check at <http://www.apa.udel.edu/apa>.

1. REGISTRATION

Rates for registration are as follows:

APA Members:	$50
Non-members:	$60
Student members:	$10

These rates are the same as for the previous five years. Of the $50 the Eastern Division collects from each APA member, $35 will be returned to the National Office to cover the salaries of staff members essential to the functioning of the Division. The remaining $15 will go to offset meeting expenses directly. All those participating in the meeting are expected to register, and to wear their name badges to signify that they have done so. The staff conducts random checks at the meeting, and those who have not registered are asked to do so immediately.

Persons who are not now members may take advantage of the lower registration fee for members by joining the APA. Regular and student membership application forms are available from the APA National Office, on the APA's web site (www.udel.edu/apa), and will be available during the meeting at the APA Registration Desk. The APA Registration Desk will be open on:

Thursday, December 27:	3:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m.
Friday, December 28:	8:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m.
Saturday, December 29:	8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.
Sunday, December 30:	8:30 a.m. to Noon

Only registrants are entitled to attend the Reception on December 28th at no additional charge. Non-registrants who wish to attend this reception must purchase a $10 ticket; tickets will be available at the door to the reception. For those who register, name badges will serve as proof of registration.

2. PLACEMENT SERVICE

The APA Placement Service functions mainly as a channel of communication between interviewers and job applicants. It can be particularly valuable when other arrangements fail to function properly. For this reason, interviewers and candidates, even those who plan to use the Placement Center for no other purpose, should inform the Placement Center about how they may be contacted in case of an emergency. The placement process will operate most smoothly when appointing officers and applicants make preparations for their part in advance of the Annual Meeting and when interviews are arranged prior to the meeting on the basis of listings in Jobs for Philosophers. Detailed information about the APA Placement Service can be found elsewhere in this issue of the Proceedings.

A Placement Ombudsperson, either the Chair or a member of the APA Committee on Academic Career Opportunities and Placement, will be available in the Placement Service area for anyone encountering problems with the interviewing process.

3. BOOK EXHIBITS

The publishers' book exhibit area is open at the following times:

Friday, December 28:	10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m.
Saturday, December 29:	10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m.
Sunday, December 30:	9:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m.

4. PRESIDENTIAL ADDRESS

The Presidential Address will be delivered by Anthony Appiah at 6:00 p.m., December 29th. The title of the address is "Experimental Philosophy."

5. CARUS LECTURES

The Eastern Division is pleased this year to host the Paul Carus Lectures, to be given by Bastiaan Van Fraassen. The general title for the three lectures is Appearance, Reality, and [the] I. Lecture I, "On Neurath's Ship: Naturalism (?)," will be given at 1:30 p.m. on December 28th; Lecture II, "On What There Is: Realism (?)," at 1:30 p.m. on December 29th; Lecture III, "On Being Somewhere: The Self Delusion (?)," at 11:15 a.m. on December 30th. There will also be a Carus Reception from 4:30-6:00 p.m. on December 28th.

6. JOHN DEWEY LECTURE

At its 2004 meeting, the Eastern Division Executive Committee accepted a generous offer from the John Dewey Foundation to fund a John Dewey Lecture at each annual meeting. The Dewey Lecture is given by a prominent and senior (typically retired) American philosopher who is invited to reflect, broadly and in an autobiographical spirit, on philosophy in America. The Eastern Division is pleased to announce that its second John Dewey Lecture will be given by Hilary Putnam at 2:45 p.m. on December 29th (session VI-L). The lecture will be immediately followed by a reception.

Nominations are invited for future Eastern Division Dewey Lecturers. The 2008 Dewey Lecturer will be J.B. Schneewind. At its annual meeting on December 27th, the Executive Committee will establish a short list of candidates for Dewey Lecturer in 2009, and will take into account nominations received from members. Please send all nominations by November 15th to the Office of the Secretary-Treasurer, Department of Philosophy, Johns Hopkins University, 3400 N. Charles St., Baltimore, MD 21218-2686, or by email to rbett1@jhu.edu.

7. RECEPTIONS AND RECEPTION TABLES

There will be Receptions on the nights of December 28th, from 8:00 p.m. to Midnight, and December 29th, from 9:00 p.m. to Midnight.

The large round tables at the Receptions will be numbered. A chart will be distributed at registration giving the table locations along with an index showing, for each table, who has reserved it.

Departments and societies are invited to reserve tables for a fee of $25 per table for both nights. If you wish to reserve a table, please fill out and mail the form included in the back pages of this issue of the Proceedings or call or email Ms. Linda Smallbrook at the National Office (Phone: 302-831-1113; Fax: 302-831-3372; email: lindas@udel.edu). The deadline for making table reservations is December 12th.

8. BUSINESS MEETING AND VOTING MEMBERSHIP

The annual Business Meeting will be held on December 29th at 11:15 a.m. There will be reports from Divisional and National Officers and Committees.

According to the Association's Bylaws, regular membership is given by an act of the Executive Director on behalf of the Board of Officers. Each year the list of regular members that appears in the November issue of the Proceedings is used as the list of eligible voters for the three subsequent Divisional meetings. Certification of persons as voting affiliates of the Eastern Division will take place at the entrance to the Business Meeting itself, for those wishing to attend and to vote.

9. RESOLUTIONS

- (a) All resolutions to be presented for inclusion on the agenda of the Business Meeting as separate items must be submitted in writing to the Secretary-Treasurer at least nine weeks in advance of the Annual Meeting (by October 25, 2007) in order to be properly announced to the membership.
  - (b) No question of a substantive nature other than routine business shall be in order under "New Business" unless it has been received by the Secretary-Treasurer three weeks in advance of the Annual Meeting (by December 6, 2007) for transmission to the Executive Committee, except if three-fourths of the Eastern Division affiliates in attendance at the Business Meeting vote that such a question should be taken up at that meeting.
  - (c) According to section 5.5.D of the Bylaws of the APA, "Resolutions which purport to represent the sense of a Division on matters of public policy may be voted on only by mail ballot authorized by the annual Business Meeting of that Division. Such mail ballots will include relevant minutes of the meeting and a summary of the arguments presented."
  - (d) The Eastern Division Executive Committee has the prerogative to order a mail ballot on any question of a substantive nature other than routine business that may come before the Business Meeting.
  - (e) There is a Resolutions Subcommittee of the Executive Committee consisting of the Vice President, the Divisional Representative to the Board of Officers, and the Secretary-Treasurer, each of whom is available to consult with members before and during the Annual Meeting, on the preparation of resolutions.

10. THE 2008 PROGRAM COMMITTEE

The 2008 Program Committee invites contributions for the 2008 Annual Meeting that will be held in Philadelphia on December 27-30. The 2008 Program Committee is composed of:

Tamar Gendler (Chair)
Kenneth Baynes
Richard Bett (ex officio)
Cian Dorr
Steven Gross
Eva Kittay
Christia Mercer
Ram Neta
Lorenzo Simpson
Shannon Sullivan
Laurence Thomas
Iakovos Vasiliou
Scott Weinstein

The deadline for submitted papers for the 2008 meeting is February 15, 2008. For further details on how and where to submit papers for consideration, see the section on Paper Submission Guidelines elsewhere in this issue.

The 2008 Program Committee welcomes nominations, including self-nominations, for commentators and session chairs. In selecting commentators and chairs, the Program Committee tends to prefer, other things being equal, persons who have not made frequent appearances on the Eastern Division Program in the past few years. Nominations should be sent to the Chair of the Program Committee, Tamar Gendler, Department of Philosophy, Yale University, P.O. Box 208306, New Haven, CT 06520-8306. Nominations should be received by the Chair no later than April 1, 2008; they should include a short list of significant or representative publications by the nominee, and should indicate the nominee's area(s) of specialization. (A curriculum vitae is not required for this purpose.)

11. GRADUATE STUDENT TRAVEL STIPENDS AND THE WILLIAM JAMES PRIZE

The Eastern Division is pleased to announce that there are two sources of financial support for junior members of the Association who wish to submit papers for consideration for the Eastern Division program. One source is the Graduate Student Travel Stipends, the other is the William James Prize. The guidelines for both are given below.

Graduate Student Travel Stipends. The Eastern Division will award a $300 travel stipend for any paper written by a graduate student that is accepted by the Program Committee in its normal, blind-review process. Eligibility is restricted to APA members or student associate members who are graduate students in good standing in an M.A. or Ph.D. program in philosophy. A graduate student may submit a paper either as a colloquium paper or as a symposium paper. Authors who are willing to have a shortened version of a symposium paper considered as a colloquium paper should submit the shortened version, along with a shortened abstract, simultaneously with the submission of the symposium paper. Authors must comply with all rules, including those intended to ensure the integrity of the process of blind-reviewing, that govern normal submissions to the Program Committee (see the APA Paper Submission Guidelines and the Eastern Division Paper Submission Information elsewhere in the Proceedings or on the APA web site, www.udel.edu/apa), with two modifications. First, the author must indicate that the paper is being submitted for consideration for a graduate student travel stipend. If the paper is submitted electronically, this is to be done by checking the relevant box on the online submission form; if it is submitted by mail, the paper must be accompanied by a cover letter indicating that the paper is in competition for a graduate student stipend. (This information is not to be included in the paper itself.) Second, whichever method of submission is used, the author must also supply, at the time of submission, documentation from the author's institution showing that the author is a graduate student in good standing.

William James Prize. The Eastern Division will award the William James Prize to the best paper in the area of American Philosophy that is both (a) written by a philosopher who received the Ph.D. after January 1, 2003, or is a graduate student, and (b) accepted for inclusion in the Eastern Division program by the Program Committee through the normal process of blind-reviewing. Thanks to a generous gift from Professor and Mrs. John Lachs, the James Prize carries with it an honorarium of $300. For purposes of competition for the James Prize, American Philosophy is to be construed broadly as including not only studies of the work of significant thinkers in the history of American Philosophy but also creative extensions or applications of the ideas, methods, or results of traditional American Philosophy to philosophical issues of current interest or lasting importance.

A paper may be submitted for the competition for the James Prize either as a colloquium paper or as a symposium paper. Authors who are willing to have a shortened version of a symposium paper considered as a colloquium paper should submit the shortened version, along with a shortened abstract, simultaneously with the submission of the symposium paper. Authors must comply with all rules, including those intended to ensure the integrity of the process of blind-reviewing, that govern normal submissions to the Program Committee (see the APA Paper Submission Guidelines and the Eastern Division Paper Submission Information elsewhere in the Proceedings or on the APA web site, www.udel.edu/apa). In addition, each submission for the competition for the James Prize must be accompanied by a letter from its author both (a) stating either the date on which the author's Ph.D. was granted if the author has already received the Ph.D., or the fact that the author is a graduate student if that is the case, and (b) expressing the author's wish to have the paper considered for the James Prize. (The paper may, as usual, be submitted either electronically or by mail, but the letter must be mailed.)

The competition for the William James Prize in 2008 will be judged by a subcommittee of the 2008 Program Committee. Its members are Tamar Gendler (Chair of the Program Committee, serving ex officio), Richard Bett (Secretary-Treasurer of the Eastern Division, serving ex officio), and two other committee members.

In the event that no entrant marked specifically for the William James Prize competition is accepted by the Program Committee, the Program Committee will survey the Graduate Student Travel Stipend recipients to see whether any of those papers qualifies by topic for the James Prize. If one (or more) does so qualify, it (or the best one) will receive the William James Prize instead of a Graduate Student Travel Stipend. No paper may be awarded both the William James Prize and a Graduate Student Travel Stipend.

Each recipient of an award will be acknowledged in the printed program for the annual Eastern Division Meeting.

12. APA PRIZE RECEPTION

There will be a special reception for the presentation of awards, at which all meeting registrants are welcome. This reception is sponsored by Polity, an independent British press who partners with Blackwell for marketing purposes. The prize reception will take place at 5:45-6:45 p.m. on December 28th. The awards to be presented include the Graduate Student Travel Stipends and William James Prize, as well as a number of national APA prizes; the specifics are listed with the announcement of the reception in the main program.

13. THE 2009 PROGRAM COMMITTEE

The Eastern Division's Committee on Committees, whose ex officio members are the Vice President, the Divisional Representative to the Board of Officers, and the Secretary-Treasurer, invites nominations, including self-nominations, for membership on the 2009 Program Committee. Nominees should be voting affiliates of the Eastern Division. Each nomination must be accompanied by the nominee's curriculum vitae and must be received by December 1, 2007, at the Office of the Secretary-Treasurer, Department of Philosophy, Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, MD 21218-2686.

On behalf of the Executive and Program Committees, I extend to every member of The American Philosophical Association a warm invitation to take part in our one hundred and fourth Annual Meeting.

Cordially yours,

Richard Bett, Secretary-Treasurer

ABSTRACTS OF COLLOQUIUM PAPERS

CLIFFORDIAN KNIGHTS OF THE RAZOR AND THE JAMESIAN SPIRITUAL SPHERE: EVIDENCE AND AN UNSEEN REALM (IV-F)

MELISSA BERGERON, US MILITARY ACADEMY—WEST POINT

William James, contrary to common belief, is not arguing to isolate or protect religious belief from evidential scrutiny; rather, he is arguing that the evidential warrant is nonintellectual, i.e., experiential and so subjective. His talk of each individual needing to risk (or not) for herself is due largely to the fact that only she can evaluate the force of the evidence she has for taking the world religiously. Unfortunately (and ironically), “The Will to Believe” is—of James’s various discussions of the justification of religious belief—the weakest presentation of this view. One must look to his other works to appreciate the force of his will to believe doctrine.

ARISTOTLE ON THE ORDER AND DIRECTION OF TIME (VI-D)

JOHN BOWIN, UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA—SANTA CRUZ

I prove, in this paper, that Aristotle has the resources within his philosophy to answer a common criticism of his account of the order and the direction of time. In Book 4 of the Physics, Aristotle argues that the order of time is derived from the order of change by something like a one-one, structure-preserving mapping from the phases of a change to the instants at which they occur. Aristotle claims that the order of time can be derived in this way since time is a property of change, and is ontologically dependent on change. I refute the criticism that this derivation is viciously circular.

IS DIVORCE PROMISE-BREAKING? (VII-H)

ELIZABETH BRAKE, UNIVERSITY OF CALGARY

Wedding vows seem to be promises. So they go: “I promise to love, honor, and cherish ....” But this poses a problem. Divorce is not widely seen as a serious moral wrong. However, breaking a promise is widely seen as a serious moral wrong. I first consider a “hard-line” response: divorce is indeed prima facie impermissible promise-breaking. I show this has some plausibility when combined with the “hardship” response—that the hardship of failed marriages overrides the prima facie duty to keep promises. However, I reject this, primarily because it would entail that promisors are released in far too many cases. I argue instead for the “hard-headed” response: wedding vows are not promises at all. We cannot promise to do acts the performance of which are outside our control, and the intentions to love, and so on, expressed in wedding vows involve states of mind outside our control.

AN EXTENSIONAL APPROACH TO QUANTIFIER DOMAIN RESTRICTION (VIII-E)

BERIT BROGAARD, AUSTRALIAN NATIONAL UNIVERSITY

It is widely agreed that the quantifiers of natural language quantify over restricted domains. ‘Every student writes a senior thesis’, for example, is not normally used to assert something that is true iff every student in the universe writes a senior thesis. But, as we will see, one of the most popular accounts of domain restriction due to Stanley and Szabo cannot fully account for such phenomena. Schlenker has recently offered an alternative account which is compatible with minimalism about semantic content: no domain variables are posited in the syntax, and restrictions are stated in the meta-language, ‘the way it is done in modal logic’. But Schlenker’s proposal too is less than fully adequate as a theory of natural language, as it presupposes a first-order approach to quantification. Fortunately, generalized quantifier theory can be extended to account for domain restriction in natural language without rejecting minimalism about semantic content.

A DILEMMA FOR KORSGAARD: THE INTERNALISM REQUIREMENT OR THE UNIVERSAL NORMATIVITY OF MORAL REASONS? (VI-E)

DANIELLE BROMWICH, UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

Korsgaard’s understanding of internalism is in tension with her commitment to the universal normativity of moral reasons. She holds that only rational agents—not all agents—can be moved by understood reasons for action. This version of internalism allows Korsgaard to respond to the practical reason sceptic, but it jars with her commitment to universal normativity of moral reasons for all—not just perfectly rational—agents. After all, while imperfectly rational agents have a duty to be moral, Korsgaard accepts that some agents may be incapable of being moved by moral reasons due to irrationality. I argue that if we accept that there is a duty to develop a moral character, then this tension can be largely removed.

CORPORATE ENVIRONMENTAL RESPONSIBILITY: A KANTIAN APPROACH (V-I)

KEITH BUSTOS, UNIVERSITY OF TENNESSEE

While Kantian morality prescribes no direct duties to the natural environment, it is possible to generate environmental duties from the Categorical Imperative (CI), specifically the Formulation of Humanity as an End in Itself (FH). I focus only on three duties that apply directly to corporate managers given their role within society as corporate leaders. So, I argue (by appealing to the views of three contemporary Kant scholars) that the following environmental duties apply to all corporate managers and these duties contribute to a foundation for a Kantian corporate environmental responsibility.

- A duty to obey environmental laws within the U.S. and abroad.
  - A duty to abstain from dominating the political process of environmental policy formation.

- A duty to save those aspects of the natural environment that constitute the material basis for all human life, for human production, and for human culture.

THE EMERGENT COMPONENT OF TRUST IN “BELIEVING SOMEONE” (VII-G)

ALBERT CHAN, UNIVERSITY OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

The notion of “believing someone” remains equivocal unless we differentiate believing “in” someone from believing someone regarding a particular proposition. The former involves aligning ourselves, putting confidence, placing hope, or trusting in another. The latter comprises dependence and reliance. Trust incorporates an emergent open-ended attitude toward a specific person while reliance gravitates toward a chosen specific attitude toward the source of propositional content. Believing the personal object accounts for our relationships among enemies, strangers, and intimates along with multiple influences at any given moment. Believing someone turns on the crucial questions of what “it means” and what do “I mean” in believing another person.

DISPOSITIONS AND THE VALUE OF VIRTUE (VII-I)

BRADFORD COKELET, NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY

Recently, Thomas Hurka has argued that the way people deploy virtue concepts in everyday ethical thought spells trouble for neo-Aristotelian virtue ethicists: he claims that everyday thought tells in favor of the occurrent-state conception of virtue, which he advocates, and tells against the dispositional conception embraced by neo-Aristotelians. My primary aim here is to review and rebuff Hurka’s attack on the dispositional conception, but in disputing Hurka’s claim that everyday ethical thought is aligned with the occurrent-state conception of virtue concepts, I also identify a strategy for motivating and developing a form of dispositionalism which evades his criticism and the criticisms mounted by fans of situationist psychology.

“EDIBLE” AND OTHER -IBLES: A CASE STUDY IN LINGUISTICALLY ORIENTED PHENOMENOLOGY (VIII-E)

ANDRES COLAPINTO, STONY BROOK UNIVERSITY—STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK

For Husserl, linguistic structures could serve methodologically to bring into view the structured intentional objectivities our language can express. Departing from Husserl’s analysis of “attribution”—viz. nominal phrases like “the white paper,” derived, in Husserl’s analysis, from judgments like, “The paper is white”—I investigate the syntactic and semantic behavior of a peculiar class of adjectives: “-ible/able” adjectives like “edible,” “navigable,” “portable,” etc. A careful attention to their employment brings to view a unique kind of intentional comportment towards objects and properties—one I label “eventive attribution”—whose analysis helps refine Husserl’s initial contributions, and points the way to further research.

EFFICACY IN THE BOOK OF MASTER GUIGU (VIII-F)

DANIEL COYLE, OUR LADY OF THE LAKE UNIVERSITY

The controversial book that passes under the title “Guiguzi—the Master of Ghost Valley,” transmits an arcane wisdom linked to statesmen, strategists, and certain “Daoist” traditions from Warring States China. Since the Han Dynasty, the orthodox Confucian tradition largely disdains the school and text of Master Guigu, perceiving them as philosophically subversive. The transmitted text attributed to Master Guigu is extremely abstruse and ostensibly countercurrent to mainstream Chinese traditions; it remains somewhat clandestine and resistant to philosophical analysis. The purpose of this paper is to show that The Book of Master Guigu’s dominant and yet little-known contribution to Chinese thought is the development and implementation of yinyang cosmological doctrines into a unique praxiology of efficacy. No other text in the classical Chinese philosophical tradition ventures to discuss efficacy as explicitly as The Book of Master Guigu.

A PHENOMENOLOGY OF POLITICAL APATHY: SCHELER AND ARENDT ON MASS VIOLENCE (IV-E)

ZACHARY DAVIS, ST. JOHN’S UNIVERSITY

My intent in this paper is to add a new fold into the analytic of mass movements, a type of phenomenology of the emotions. Taking Max Scheler and Hannah Arendt as the initial guides, I focus on the feeling of the political apathy, perhaps the most defining feeling accorded to the traditional sense of the masses. An investigation into the feeling of political apathy provides a distinctive form of access that reveals both the moment wherein mass movements become criminal and the means by which to address their criminality more effectively.

NORMATIVE JUDGMENTS, PERSONAL TRAITS OF THE JUDGE, AND THE BASING RELATIONSHIP (VII-G)

JOHN DAVIS, CALIFORNIA STATE UNIVERSITY—FULLERTON

Beliefs in ethics and law sometimes correlate with irrelevant personal traits, such that if the subject had a different socioeconomic background, gender, or personality, but had all the same information and epistemic virtues, his or her belief would be different. To have a justified belief, your belief must have the proper basing relationship with whatever evidence justifies it. It may seem that if your belief correlates with such personal traits, it is not really based on the considerations you claim as reasons for believing it. I deny this, and argue that this correlation is compatible with having properly based beliefs.

ON CAUSAL ACCOUNTS OF THE REPRESENTATIONALITY OF CARTESIAN SENSATIONS (V-J)

RAFFAELLA DE ROSA, RUTGERS UNIVERSITY—NEWARK

Margaret Wilson and Tad Schmaltz have defended a causal account of the representationality of Cartesian sensations. Causal accounts, among other things, allegedly offer a solution to the Cartesian puzzle of sensory misrepresentation. In this paper, I argue, contra Wilson and Schmaltz, that causal accounts fail to provide both a satisfactory account of the representationality of Cartesian sensations and a solution to the above puzzle. I conclude that the failure of causal accounts suggests the presence of an internalist element in Descartes' account of the representationality of sensations and, hence, that the prospects for explaining the notion of sensory (mis)representation lie in understanding the interaction between internalist and causal elements in Descartes' views on sensory content.

HOW MUST WE BE TO KNOW WHAT IS? DEMYSTIFYING HEIDEGGER'S PRELIMINARY QUESTION (IV-E)

CHAD ENGELLAND, JOHN CARROLL UNIVERSITY

Heidegger's goal is to inquire into the reciprocity of Dasein and being, but in Being and Time and related works he poses a preliminary question about Dasein. Early and late, Heidegger acknowledges that his main question becomes intelligible only by way of the preliminary question because it engages the philosophical tradition in a productive way. In particular, it forges together the ancient question about beings and the modern question about knowledge, asking, "How must we be to be open to what we are not and yet nonetheless is?" The paper shows how Heidegger identifies the modern condition for the possibility of cognition with the classical enabling power of essence. We are open to things in our essence and only for this reason can things appear to us as they are. The paper concludes by examining Heidegger's later critique of the way he formulated the preliminary question about Dasein.

THE ORDER QUESTION: PLATO'S THEORY OF LOVE IN THE SYMPOSIUM (VIII-F)

RICHARD FOLEY, UNIVERSITY OF MISSOURI-COLUMBIA

Plato's Symposium has recently occasioned extensive scholarly disagreement on the Order Question, viz. What is the principle governing the order of the seven speeches? I argue that the correct answer to the Order Question requires linking the sequence of speeches to Diotima's famous description of the ascent in the study of beauty, the "Socratic ladder." Complications arise with the speeches of Aristophanes and Alcibiades, yet I argue for understanding these complications as elements in an overarching Platonic theory of love that transcends the contributions of any single symposiast, Socrates included.

STRUCTURING ENDS (VI-E)

JONATHAN GARTHOFF, NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY

There is disagreement among contemporary theorists regarding the nature of a person's good. On one hand there are "substantive good" views, according to which the most important elements of a person's good are due to her nature as a human, rational, and/or sentient being. On the other hand there are "agent-constituted" views, which contend that a person's good is constituted by her particular aims, desires, and/or preferences. Each approach captures important features of the good, but neither can provide a complete account: agent-constituted theories have difficulty accounting for the normativity of their claims, and substantive good theories have difficulty accounting for how a person's actually adopted aims shape what he has reason to do. I articulate and defend a hybrid view that equals these approaches in systematicity of explanation yet seeks to surpass them in coherence with ordinary judgments about what a person's good consists in.

READING THE MIND OF GOD (WITHOUT HEBREW LESSONS): ALSTON, SHARED ATTENTION, AND MYSTICAL EXPERIENCE (IV-F)

ADAM GREEN, SAINT LOUIS UNIVERSITY

In his book Perceiving God, William Alston attempts to exploit structural similarities between sense perception and mystical religious experiences so as both to elucidate the epistemic machinery of mystical practice, and to safeguard its theoretical respectability by linking it with sense perception. He argues that sense perception and mystical practice ought to be regarded as species of the same genus, perception simpliciter. However, this suggestion becomes problematic when one realizes that the sort of predicates which are used of God in reports of mystical experiences are ones that are familiar features of the natural order but are not objects of the type of perception which Alston's account uses. It is argued in this paper that, for the theist at least, Alston must construe mystical experiences in terms of what developmental psychologists have come to call "shared attention," if he is to champion the epistemic status of mystical experience.

RESOLVING A TRILEMMA FOR KANT'S THEORY OF AFFECTION (VIII-G)

BRYAN HALL, INDIANA UNIVERSITY SOUTHEAST

Hans Vaihinger, in the late 19th century, posed a trilemma for Kant's theory of affection requiring affecting objects to be either (1) things-in-themselves, (2) appearances, or (3) both things-in-themselves and appearances (so-called double affection). Each of these three horns has its own problems. Whereas most commentators assume, along with Vaihinger himself, that appearances are particulars when trying to overcome the trilemma, Rae Langton develops a relational view of appearances. After examining Langton's interpretation as well as the problems that face it, I will develop an alternative interpretation, one that views appearances as intrinsic relations between phenomenal objects and cognitive subjects. My view on appearances dispels Vaihinger's trilemma since it does not require affection by things-in-themselves nor does it require appearances to be affecting objects. Even so, experience is still wholly phenomenal since objects and subjects are reciprocally necessary and possible only through appearance relations.

A PROBLEM FOR TYE'S PANIC THEORY AND A METHODOLOGICAL CONCERN ABOUT THE REPRESENTATIONAL APPROACH TO PHENOMENAL CONSCIOUSNESS (VI-G)

JASON HEDDERMAN, UNIVERSITY OF MISSOURI-COLUMBIA

In this paper I argue that Tye's PANIC theory has the following consequence: when a normal subject undergoes a non-veridical visual experience the subject of the experience is to some degree or other a visual zombie. This renders the PANIC theory implausible and, I suggest, reveals a general methodological problem facing representationalism, namely, that of making good on how representational contents "fit" into the physical world that avoids what I claim is a consequence of the PANIC theory.

DEFENDING LEWIS'S COMPATIBILISM (IV-G)

CHARLES HERMES, UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS-ARLINGTON

David Lewis distinguishes senses in which an agent both can and cannot render a law of nature false. Doing so allows him to distinguish between an agent's ability to run an eight-minute mile in a deterministic world and the agent's inability to run faster than the speed of light. Helen Beebe, however, has argued that Lewis's distinction collapses because it entails that agents possess both of these abilities. Underlying Beebe's criticism is the claim that laws ought to affect human behavior in the same manner as they affect the behavior of the basic particles of physics. Since Humean laws describe but do not constrain an electron's behavior, Humean laws should not constrain agent's abilities. While Beebe's argument fails, it demonstrates that Lewis's analysis of counterfactuals is more intimately tied to his analysis of counterfactuals than is typically realized.

BRANDOM'S IDEALIST THESIS: WHAT'S THE IDEA? (VIII-E)

PHILLIP HONENBERGER, TEMPLE UNIVERSITY

In an essay on Hegel, Robert Brandom presents an idea he calls "the idealist thesis," which he defines as the thesis that "the unity and structure of the concept is the same as the unity and structure of the self." Tom Rockmore, however, writes that he "cannot make any sense of the so-called idealist thesis." What is the meaning of Brandom's idealist thesis? Does it rely on a merely abstract and structural similarity between concepts and selves, or does it rather establish a deeper, asymmetrical, ontologically-significant connection between the two? This essay recounts the argument for the idealist thesis as given in chapter seven of Brandom's Tales of the Mighty Dead (2002), and argues that there are good reasons for entertaining the thesis, reasons related to the Kantian distinction between transcendental and empirical selfhood.

SOUL AND NATURAL SUBLUNARY ELEMENTAL MOTION IN ARISTOTLE (VI-D)

ERROL KATAYAMA, OHIO NORTHERN UNIVERSITY

In Physics 8.4, Aristotle identifies the generator of "the light and heavy" or whatever removes the obstacle that blocked their motion as the mover of their natural motion. One of the difficulties is that Aristotle seems to have identified only an accidental, and not an essential, cause of the natural elemental motion; for generating an element and moving it are two different causes, and removing of an obstacle is a blatant example of accidental cause. By critically analyzing “the doctrine of natural places,” and emphasizing the point that, for Aristotle, it is always the case that the soul is a mover and the body is moved, I shall argue that in the case of sublunary elements that are inanimate, it is ultimately the soul that by the very act of generating an element also at the same time imparts and initiates the motion.

LOCKE’S PROTESTANT STATE OF NATURE: COLONIALISM AND THE PROBLEM OF JURISDICTION (VI-F)

CHAD KAUTZER, STONY BROOK UNIVERSITY—STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK

It has been argued that Locke’s interest in British colonialism trumped his philosophical integrity insofar as he mischaracterized Amerindian life as a state of nature in the Two Treatises to justify subjugation and dispossession. Rather than a case of political misuse, however, Locke’s most famous description of the state of nature is best understood precisely as a juridical description of the colonial condition—part of a Protestant natural law alternative to jurisdictional claims based on first occupation, racial inferiority, or papal donation. In it, Locke provides us with two mechanisms for establishing nonconsensual jurisdiction, which successfully circumvent the philosophical problems encountered by his neo-Thomist and Protestant predecessors, while also undermining the absolutism of Grotius, Hobbes, Pufendorf, and Filmer. This reading, I argue, is consistent with recent scholarship, has greater historical and textual support than previous interpretations, and counters many, if not all, critiques of Locke’s so-called abstract individualism.

WHY MINIMALISM FAILS AS A JUSTIFICATION FOR DEMOCRACY (V-H)

CHRISTOPHER KING, VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY

Minimalism—the sort of view expressed by Joseph Schumpeter and, more recently, Richard Posner—fails as a justification of democracy, or so the author concludes. Underlying this view are two divergent tendencies: (1) the view typical of liberalism that voting serves as a check on political power, and (2) the view that political participation, even at the level of voting is not of fundamental importance. In the first case, the check on power seems to suppose participation. If (2) were true there could be no check on power. By appealing to Posner’s “theory of natural leadership” the author will show that minimalism as defined by these two tendencies tends towards authoritarianism, or an inadequate concept of political participation.

RATIONALITY AND OTHER VALUES: A STUDY IN FIRST AND SECOND-PERSON MORAL NECESSITATION (VII-I)

EDWARD KLEIST, CONCORDIA COLLEGE

This preliminary study focuses on the first personal necessitating force exercised by values and reasons. While reasons exercise a necessitating force upon action, I argue that values also exert necessitation, insofar as values are subjectively necessary features of moral identity. The force exerted upon us by the value of rationality presents a special case of a subjectively necessitating commitment. I consider how other persons necessitate us with respect to both values and reasons. I conclude that while there can be a second-personal source of necessitating reasons, there is no second-personal source of necessitating values. The necessitating force of values admits only of a first-personal source, which may expand to the first-person plural. The necessitating force of reasons issuing from a second person requires shared values, thus assimilating the second person into a first person plural.

UNRESTRICTED COMPOSITION AND RESTRICTED QUANTIFICATION (IV-G)

DANIEL KORMAN, UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS—URBANA—CHAMPAIGN

Many of those who accept the universalist thesis that mereological composition is unrestricted also maintain that the folk typically restrict their quantifiers in such a way as to exclude strange fusions when they say things that appear to conflict with universalism. Despite its prima facie implausibility, there are powerful arguments for universalism. By contrast, there is remarkably little evidence for the thesis that strange fusions are excluded from the ordinary domain of quantification. There is no linguistic, psychological, or behavioral evidence, nor (I will argue) can the truth of universalism itself serve as evidence for this thesis. Furthermore, this reconciliatory strategy seems hopeless when applied to the more fundamental conflict between universalism and the intuitions that tell against it. Universalists are better advised to accept that the apparent conflict with folk belief is genuine and to try to explain the folk's mistake rather than explain it away.

PERCEPTUAL PRESENCE (VI-G)

JASON LEDDINGTON, CENTRE COLLEGE

Typically, the experience of seeing a tomato is importantly like the experience of seeing no more than an appropriately positioned tomato-part. At the same time, a typical tomato-sighting is like the experience of seeing a full-blown tomato, not merely a tomato-part. That perceptual experience typically is both of these ways is what Alva Noë calls the "two-dimensionality of perception," and he calls the puzzle to which it gives rise "the problem of perceptual presence." I agree with Noë that the two-dimensionality of perception is a genuine phenomenon to which any adequate theory of perception must do justice. However, Noë has recently attempted to account for it in terms of a perceiver's sensorimotor capacities, and this strategy faces a very serious difficulty. The purpose of this paper is to articulate this difficulty and to recommend an alternative account of perceptual two-dimensionality.

CHILDREN, GRATITUDE, AND RESPECT: FILIAL PIETY AS A VICE (VII-H)

LAWRENCE LENGBEYER, UNITED STATES NAVAL ACADEMY

It is commonly thought that children ought to be prompted to attend to their parents' needs and desires by gratitude for the great and distinctive goods that the parents have sacrificed to provide, and that it is only in exceptional cases of despicably neglectful or abusive parenting that parents forfeit their entitlement to such treatment. I will argue, to the contrary, that some of the conditions bearing upon the appropriateness of gratitude—in particular, defeasibility conditions—have been overlooked, and that a more complete understanding reveals that gratitude is very often not due to parents in our society, due to their failure to accord due respect to their children. Consequently, many, many real-life cases call for little, or no, filial piety from children—in which cases its provision might actually bespeak a character vice on the part of the children, rather than a virtue.

AQUINAS ON JUDGING INJUSTICE: JUSTICE IN AQUINAS' COMMENTARY ON ARISTOTLE'S NICOMACHEAN ETHICS (VI-E)

THORNTON LOCKWOOD, BOSTON UNIVERSITY

In the Nicomachean Ethics, Aristotle claims that justice differs from the other ethical virtues since it is not said “simply” (1108b7-9). But such a remark hardly explains why justice requires an entirely separate—and extended—treatment. In his Commentary on Aristotle's Nicomachean Ethics, Thomas Aquinas accounts for Aristotle's distinctive treatment of justice on the basis of its relationship to what Aquinas calls the “will.” According to Aquinas, the other ethical virtues of the Nicomachean Ethics are concerned with the passions, but Aristotle “explained justice after the manner of a will, which does not have passions but nevertheless is the principle of external actions” (§889). In my paper I explore Aquinas' claim and argue that although it is partially based on Aristotelian moral psychology, it is ultimately based on a decidedly un-Aristotelian commitment to the subordination of human law to divine law.

FROM BEING TO GIVENNESS AND BACK: SOME REMARKS ON THE MEANING OF TRANSCENDENTAL IDEALISM IN KANT AND HUSSERL (VIII-G)

SEBASTIAN LUFT, MARQUETTE UNIVERSITY

This paper takes a fresh look at a classical theme in modern philosophy. I present Kant's transcendental idealism as a theory distinguishing between the world as in-itself and as given to the experiencing human being. This reconstruction provides the backdrop for Husserl's transcendental phenomenology as a brand of transcendental idealism expanding on Kant: Through the phenomenological reduction Husserl universalizes Kant's transcendental philosophy into an eidetic science of subjectivity. Thereby, Husserl provides a new sense of transcendental philosophy; rephrases the “quid iuris?”; and furnishes a new conception of the thing-in-itself. What needs to be clarified is not the possibility of a priori cognition but, instead, the validity of objects that give themselves in experience. The thing-in-itself is not an unknowable object, but the idea of the object in all possible appearances at once. In all these innovations Husserl remains committed to the basic sense in which Kant conceived the Copernican Turn.

INTRINSIC EXPLANATION AND FIELD’S DISPENSABILIST STRATEGY (V-G)

RUSSELL MARCUS, HAMILTON COLLEGE

Philosophy of mathematics for the last half-century has been dominated in one way or another by Quine’s indispensability argument. The argument alleges that our best scientific theory quantifies over, and thus commits us to, mathematical objects. In this paper, I present new considerations which undermine the most serious challenge to Quine’s argument, Hartry Field’s reformulation of Newtonian Gravitational Theory.

IS BEING ONE ONLY ONE?: THE UNIQUENESS OF PLATONIC FORMS (VIII-F)

ANNA MARMODORO, OXFORD UNIVERSITY

Each Form is unique in number; no two numerically distinct Forms can share the same nature. Plato argues for this claim in Republic X. I identify the metaphysical principles Plato presupposes in the premises of the argument by examining the reasoning behind them, and offer a reconstruction of the argument showing the principles in use. I argue that the metaphysical significance of the argument’s conclusion is to establish that if a Form F were not unique, if there were many Forms F, their nature would alter along with their number: a Form cannot recur without change in its constitution. This is why there can be only one Form for each character in the world.

RE-THINKING INFINITY: ALAIN BADIOU’S BEING AND EVENT (VIII-D)

ADAM MILLER, COLLINS COMMUNITY COLLEGE

What is most immediately striking about Alain Badiou’s Being and Event is its tight recapitulation of nearly fifty years of French philosophy. However, while this is remarkable in itself, it threatens to obscure the more important question: Does this repetition produce something new? Does it produce a genuine philosophical difference? It is my thesis that, in order to read Being and Event correctly, we should read it as an effort to systematically reinscribe postmodernity within a new conception of infinity for the sake of making theoretically legible a single precarious difference: truth.

LUCK, EGALITARIANISM, RESPONSIBILITY, AND RESPECT (V-I)

ORAN MOKED, COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY

According to luck egalitarianism (LE), justice requires that we eliminate disadvantages that befall people through no choice of their own. One objection to LE is that it disrespects its beneficiaries—the victims of brute bad luck—whose disadvantage is involuntary. It does so because it singles them out as inherently inferior: it distinguishes between those who truly lack talent, and hence are not responsible for their disadvantage, and those who are talented but have chosen not to take advantage of their talents. I assess—and reject—a series of responses to this objection. None of them shows that luck egalitarian policies can avoid such stigmatizing effects. But does such criticism disqualify LE from constituting an acceptable conception of distributive justice? I argue that it does not. Even if luck egalitarian principles give rise to policies tainted by disrespect, this is no reason for rejecting them as principles of distributive justice.

REVERSIBILITY AND EREIGNIS: BEING AS KANTIAN IMAGINATION IN MERLEAU-PONTY AND HEIDEGGER (VIII-D)

DAVID MORRIS, TRENT UNIVERSITY—CANADA

This paper aims to clarify to Merleau-Ponty's difficult concept of "reversibility" by interpreting it as resuming the dialectical critique of the rationalist and empiricist tradition that informs Merleau-Ponty's earlier work. The focus is on reversibility in "Eye and Mind," as dismantling the traditional dualism of activity and passivity. This also puts reversibility in continuity with the Phenomenology's appropriation of Kant, letting us note an affiliation between Merleau-Ponty's reversibility and Heidegger's Ereignis: in each case being itself already performs the operation that Kant had located in the imagination. Reversibility discovers this Kantian imagination moving in place, Ereignis discovers it in temporality.

AN EVIDENCE PUZZLE (VIII-H)

PETER MURPHY, UNIVERSITY OF INDIANAPOLIS AND ALLEN COATES, EAST TENNESSEE STATE UNIVERSITY

This paper introduces a puzzle about evidence. A person is told that in the future they will acquire evidence for some proposition, P. After arguing that this puts the person in a position to have a justified belief that P before they have acquired the evidence, we focus on the later time when they acquire the evidence. At the later time, what happens to the earlier justification for believing P? There are only two possibilities: either it no longer contributes to the person's overall justification for believing P, or it still contributes. We present arguments against each possibility.

THE PARADOX OF IDEALIZATION (IV-H)

JULIEN MURZI, UNIVERSITY OF SHEFFIELD—UNITED KINGDOM AND SALVATORE FLORIO, OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY

In this paper, we present a new Paradox of Knowability to the effect that not all truths are knowable in principle. Our result shows that a plausible interpretation of the thesis that all truths are knowable is in fact inconsistent with some reasonable assumptions about truths that are not feasibly knowable by us. The new proof presents some advantages over the original Knowability Paradox first published by Frederic Fitch. Contrary to this latter one, it is in fact intuitionistically valid and it resists hierarchical treatment. It can therefore be seen as a useful tool for selecting adequate solutions to the Knowability Paradoxes. We end by suggesting a possible way of blocking the Paradoxes.

THE POSSESSION CONDITIONS OF ARITHMETICAL CONCEPTS (V-G)

CHRISTOPHER PINCOCK, PURDUE UNIVERSITY

On the assumption that there is an informative account of what is involved in the possession of arithmetical concepts, can we draw any metaphysical conclusions about the nature of the numbers themselves? I argue that the answer to this question is “yes,” at least for the influential account of concept possession developed by Christopher Peacocke. But, against Peacocke, I claim that his project supports a structuralist interpretation of arithmetic, as opposed to the more traditional objects-based version of platonism. The discussion turns on the link between numbers and counting, and the apparent circularity that results from including the role of numbers in counting in the possession conditions of the concept of number.

ARISTOTLE ON LUCK AND CHANCE (VI-D)

JULIE PONESSE, UNIVERSITY OF WESTERN ONTARIO

In the middle of the 4th century B.C., on his way to mapping out the nature and number of causes in Physics II, Aristotle provided a theory of accidental causation that stands out as anomalously precise in the history of philosophical interest in the problem. Many readers, however, claim that Aristotle’s technical definition of tyche, as “what might have been due to thought and for the sake of something,” is incompatible with what they see as a broader notion of tyche in the ethical texts, as ‘whatever benefits or harms us that is beyond our control’. My aim here is to show that Aristotle’s theory of accidental causation, which runs from Physics II.4-6, not only firmly underpins, but is given practical force by, the discussions of luck in the ethical texts.

MIND-BODY SUPERVENIENCE’S CARDINAL SIN (VI-G)

JOSH RASMUSSEN, UNIVERSITY OF NOTRE DAME

I offer a new argument against the thesis that distinct mental states necessarily depend for their existence upon distinct physical states by arguing that there are too many thinkable thoughts for each distinct thought to enjoy a distinct physical base.

AGAINST THE GOAL OF TRUE BELIEFS (IV-H)

STEVEN REYNOLDS, ARIZONA STATE UNIVERSITY

This paper argues against the popular view that knowledge is best understood in terms of a personal goal of believing only the truth. Instead, I argue that encouraging better testimony is the public goal that motivates our society-wide practice of attributing and denying knowledge. The main idea is that we have voluntary control over our testimony, which could thus be improved in response to being praised as known, while our indirect and partial control over our beliefs and ways of acquiring beliefs does not seem to be a likely target for improvement by praise.

CONTEXTUALISM AND VIRTUE PERSPECTIVISM: HOW TO PRESERVE OUR INTUITIONS ABOUT KNOWLEDGE AND “KNOWS” (VIII-H)

BLAKE ROEBER, NORTHERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY

Contextualism is a linguistic thesis; it is a theory not about knowledge but about the word “knows.” Almost invariably, contextualists defend their position as necessary for preserving our epistemological intuitions in the face of the so-called “skeptical paradox.” In this paper, I undermine the case for contextualism by showing how a properly Chisholmed theory of knowledge might preserve our epistemological intuitions more successfully than the linguistic thesis forwarded by contextualism. My aim is not to demonstrate that contextualism is false. Rather, I aim at orienting the debate away from the preservation of intuitions and toward the linguistic data surrounding the word “knows.”

HEIDEGGER AND FRANKFURT ON THE CIRCULARITY OF THE PRACTICAL QUESTION (IV-E)

B. SCOT ROUSSE, NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY

Harry Frankfurt has recently argued that the practical question, the question that asks “How should I live?” is irreducibly circular. The same idea is found in the early work of Martin Heidegger, who connects it to his thesis that human self-identity is determined by self-interpretation. For each this circularity gives rise to a post-Kantian notion of autonomy: Frankfurt’s “wholehearted self-identification” and Heidegger’s “authenticity.” I show the relevance of Frankfurt’s treatment of the circularity of the practical question to a debate about Heidegger’s conceptions of anxiety and authenticity. I go on to defend a new interpretation of “authenticity,” focusing on its connection to the concepts “repetition” and “transparency,” and exploring its relevance to a debate about Frankfurt’s conception of identification. I argue that the Heideggerian view is opposed to Frankfurt’s explanation of “identification” in terms of “satisfaction.”

PARTHOOD AND LOCATION (IV-G)

RAUL SAUCEDO—CORNELL UNIVERSITY

I present an argument against both directions of an assumption about how parthood and location might be distributed over some material objects and some regions of space or spacetime; namely, the claim that, necessarily, for any material things  $x$  and  $y$ ,  $x$  is part of  $y$  iff  $x$  is exactly located at a subregion of the region at which  $y$  is exactly located. I show that rejecting this claim distinguishes between two apparently equivalent ways in which a plurality of material objects and a single such thing might be related: mereological composition and what I call “minimal-expansion.” I highlight a few consequences this has for various current metaphysical discussions.

THE IMPOSSIBLE VIRTUE (VI-F)

ZACHARY SILVER, UNIVERSITY OF OKLAHOMA

According to the traditional, negative conception of toleration, to be tolerant requires that we respect other peoples' right to hold their beliefs. This understanding of toleration has been challenged by a positive conception of toleration according to which toleration requires that we respect other peoples' beliefs themselves. I argue that the claim attributed to G.K. Chesterton that "tolerance is the virtue of a man with no convictions" highlights the fatal flaw in the positive conception of toleration, that it is a demand for the impossible.

RELIVING BRITISH EMERGENTISM (V-J)

JENNIFER SUSSE, MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY

Jaegwon Kim and others have unfavorably compared contemporary Nonreductive Physicalists to the 1920s British Emergentists. I will argue that Nonreductive Physicalists have nothing to fear from this comparison. Both contemporary Nonreductive Physicalists and the British Emergentists argue for the plausible epistemological claim that there are limits on our ability to understand and predict the behavior of macroscopic objects solely from knowledge of the behavior of their microscopic particulars. Furthermore, with respect to the metaphysical assumptions underlying their epistemological claims, emergentism and nonreductive physicalism are more coherent than critics contend. In fact, I will argue that the only alternative to an extremely sparse ontology is to embrace some form of emergentism.

A FAREWELL TO DEWEYAN DEMOCRACY (V-H)

ROBERT TALISSE, VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY

The revival of pragmatism has brought renewed enthusiasm for Dewey's conception of "democracy as a way of life." The author argues that Dewey's democratic theory is unworthy of resurrection. Drawing from later Rawlsian concerns, the author first argues that Deweyan democracy cannot accommodate the fact of reasonable pluralism. Then the author argues that this failing is pragmatically consequential. The result is that Deweyan democracy fails on its own terms; pragmatists who want to theorize about democracy must abandon Dewey.

INSCRUTABLE GOODS AND THE ARGUMENT FROM HIDDENNESS (IV-F)

DAVID TAYLOR, FRANKLIN AND MARSHALL COLLEGE

AND MICHAEL MURRAY, FRANKLIN AND MARSHALL COLLEGE

Replies to The Argument from Hiddenness (for atheism) generally make reference to concrete examples of greater goods for the sake of which God might permit reasonable non-belief, thereby justifying his hiddenness. In this essay we argue that such hiddenness-justifying goods need not be discernable to us as humans; there might very well exist inscrutable goods for the sake of which God permits the reasonable non-belief in the world.

If this could be shown to be the case, then The Argument from Hiddenness would surely lose significant force. In developing the argument from inscrutable goods, we respond to three objections that John Schellenberg (a leading proponent of The Argument from Hiddenness) has made to it.

THE “POWER OF JUDGMENT” AS BLIND SPOT: DID HEIDEGGER AND ARENDT FOLLOW KANT’S OWN BLINDNESS? (VIII-D)

BENJAMIN TREMOULET, UNIVERSITÉ DE PARIS IV

Kant’s concept of the “power of judgment” (Urteilkraft) received peculiar treatment from two famous commentators and from Kant himself. Although he based his analysis on the relations between faculties, Martin Heidegger, in his famous interpretation of Kant, completely discarded this power that constitutes one of the three “higher cognitive faculties.” Hannah Arendt, despite the central role she grants to Kant’s “power of judgment,” makes a similar omission from her analysis of his concept of “common sense.” Considering the enormous influence of these authors in their respective fields, a critique of their analyses introduces new approaches to thinking through their main concerns (human finitude and common sense) that have been neglected by later thinkers. Consequently, we will try to understand what makes the “power of judgment” disappear from these central interpretations and determine the philosophical significance of these omissions. Can the reason for it be traced back to Kant’s philosophy itself?

KNOWING MOORE BY KNOWING LES: ON A SUPPOSED SOLUTION TO THE SURPRISE QUIZ PARADOX (VIII-H)

MICHAEL VEBER, EAST CAROLINA UNIVERSITY

According to the Moorean solution to the surprise quiz paradox, the announcement, “There will be a quiz next week but you don’t know what day” is true and initially known to be true by the students. But, in the event of a last day quiz, it becomes unknowable because it reduces to a Moorean absurdity. Thus a last day surprise quiz is possible. The Moorean solution is rejected because: (1) there are situations in which S can learn that P by hearing an utterance of “P but S doesn’t know that P,” and (2) in the event of a last day quiz, routes are available for students to know that the quiz is coming that don’t involve deducing it from Moorean absurdity. Either the announcement isn’t known to be true when it is made or a last day quiz can be ruled out. In any case, the paradox stands.

PRACTICAL SUCCESS AND THE NATURE OF TRUTH (IV-H)

CHASE WRENN, UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA

Why do beliefs tend to cause us to act in ways that will succeed if they are true? Philip Kitcher sees this as an important question for a theory of truth to answer. He contends that deflationary theories of truth cannot answer the question, but causal correspondence theories (CCT) can. In this paper, I argue that Kitcher’s preferred CCT explanations are really no better than the deflationary explanations he rejects as “shallow” and “uninformative.” But the inability to answer the question is not a fault in either view because the question does not pertain to the nature of truth. Rather, it pertains to the nature of belief or the nature of mind. Asking a theory of truth to give a satisfactory answer to it is like asking a theory of justice to solve the Gettier Problem.

RACE, REFERENCE, AND REALITY (VI-F)

JASON WYCKOFF, UNIVERSITY OF COLORADO—BOULDER

Various philosophers and sociologists have adopted a position that we can call “metaphysical eliminativism” about race, which is the view that races are not real, that our race-talk fails to refer to any actual entities or categories, and that we should therefore abandon the use of race terms. Many metaphysical eliminativists about race have made the inference from the nonexistence of natural kind races to the nonexistence of (social kind) races, but, as I will argue, this is a fallacious inference. Drawing upon the insights afforded by semantic externalism, I argue that races do not fail to exist simply because they turn out not to be the sorts of things we may have thought they were. Races may be social kinds, even if most people believe, or have believed, that race-talk refers to biologically defined groups of persons.

FORCE AND FEELING: KANT’S ARGUMENT IN THE AMPHIBOLY (VIII-G)

MELISSA ZINKIN, BINGHAMTON UNIVERSITY—STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK

As Kant himself presents it, the “Amphiboly” is an unsuccessful argument against Leibniz’s “intellectualism,” since Leibniz would not object to the “ambiguity” Kant attributes to him. My paper reconstructs and defends Kant’s argument by making explicit its presuppositions. In order for transcendental reflection to make the distinction between sensible and intellectual representations there must be some distinguishing mark that sensible representations have, which cannot be reduced to a concept. This is an intensive magnitude which refers to attractive and repulsive forces. However, there can be no concept, or rule, by which this mark is identified, since this would again make it thinkable by the intellect. Thus transcendental reflection must distinguish between sensible and intellectual representations by non-discursive feeling. In addition to showing the coherence of Kant’s argument in the Amphiboly, my discussion shows the connection between the faculty of transcendental reflection and reflective judgment, the subject of Kant’s third Critique.

ABSTRACTS OF INVITED AND SYMPOSIUM PAPERS

DOES A COSMOPOLITAN INTERPRETATION OF RAWLS' CONCEPTION OF FAIRNESS IMPLY DIFFERENT METHODS, AND REQUIREMENTS OF JUSTICE, THAN COMMONLY THOUGHT? (VII-F)

MARCUS ARVAN, UNIVERSITY OF ARIZONA

Many political philosophers are convinced that Rawls' arguments and principles for domestic justice can be extended more or less straightforwardly to global/international affairs. I argue here, however, that this view is mistaken. First, in order to extend Rawls' conception of fairness to illiberal societies and to global/international affairs, we must eschew Rawls' political constructivism in favor of a moral cosmopolitan interpretation of his conception of justice. Second, this interpretation implies that we must utilize a "Non-Ideal Original Position"—a device that is very different than Rawls' original position in that it does not model a social contract at all but, rather, models a kind of Rawlsian moral judge reminiscent of the sort of impartial moral judge defended in his earliest paper, "Outline of a Decision Procedure in Ethics." Finally, I provide a prima facie case for thinking that this judge has reason to select certain plausible, and plausibly liberal, principles of global/international justice that are significantly different than Rawls' two domestic principles.

THE LOGIC OF CHEMICAL SYNTHESIS: REASON AND IMAGINATION (IV-J)

PRAJIT BASU, UNIVERSITY OF HYDERABAD—INDIA

In this paper I explore a subset of experiments in science—those involving chemical synthesis. I first classify various kinds of chemical syntheses in terms of target systems, methodological strategies employed (e.g., retrosynthetic strategy), and synthetic processes—known and discovered. Next, I sketch a logic of chemical synthesis and highlight both the need for and the limitation in rule following. Finally I explore whether the work of a synthetic chemist may be understood in terms of the work of an engineer or an artist.

SOME BLINDNESS TO CHATTEL SLAVERY AND SOME INSIGHTS (IV-A)

ROBERT BERNASCONI, UNIVERSITY OF MEMPHIS

Members of historically oppressed groups are often shocked when they first encounter standard histories of philosophy and discover that issues that deeply concern them are largely ignored. Until very recently one heard little or nothing about chattel slavery, racism, colonialism, imperialism, and genocide in studies on the history of modern philosophy, and even now the prejudices of some of the less enlightened of Enlightenment philosophers on these topics are regularly dismissed with unsupported claims about “assumptions of the age.” Part of the reason for the neglect of these topics is that for most of the last sixty years the history of philosophy has been on the defensive in the English-speaking world: anxious to establish its credentials as philosophy, it has often been willing to sacrifice its legitimacy as history. To make matters worse, philosophy defined itself during this time with unprecedented narrowness, so that even the history of concepts could be sacrificed on the altar of the history of arguments. In this paper I explore some of the responses and contributions of philosophers to the rise and fall of chattel slavery. In particular, I investigate how the debate about slavery provides an excellent example of philosophical argumentation in action and an indication of the limits of an approach that is fixated too narrowly on arguments. I include a consideration of how this topic might be included in our teaching at various levels.

INTERPRETATION AND CONSTRAINT IN THE DEVELOPMENT OF SCIENCE (I-C)

HAROLD BROWN, NORTHERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY

I explore the interaction between theory-based interpretations of scientific evidence and constraints on theories provided by that evidence. While it is often claimed that evidence is theory-dependent, several different claims are grouped under this thesis. I distinguish five such claims and reject two of these—that we perceive only what we expect to perceive, and that theory-dependence generates vicious circularity in empirical tests of theories. The remaining forms of theory-dependence recognize that while evidence involves interpretation, it also involves factors that are independent of our beliefs. In particular, while accepted theory indicates the kinds of evidence that are worth pursuing, theory does not dictate what we will find when we actually look. Moreover, while evidence must be couched in the language of a theory in order to be relevant to the evaluation of that theory, this form of theory-dependence does not predetermine if the evaluation will be positive or negative. The Duhem-Quine thesis, which holds that we can always protect a favored thesis against empirical challenges, must also be handled with care. Those who invoke this thesis acknowledge that empirical challenges to our beliefs occur, but attempts to protect a favored thesis may yield new consequences that generate new empirical challenges. Scientists also endeavor to expand the variety of empirical evidence and thus the constraints on theories. As a result, whether a particular thesis can be reasonably protected must be assessed in individual cases.

These reflections lead to a discussion of the role of instrumentation in gathering evidence. As science has developed we have come to recognize that much of the natural world cannot be detected by our senses. We attempt to understand these “non-observables” by constructing theories, and we test those theories by constructing instruments that should allow us to interact with the items of interest (if they actually exist). The development of these instruments and the interpretation of their outputs are deeply dependent on theories, but this does not prevent these outputs from challenging those very theories and from making us aware of aspects of nature that we had not previously imagined. Thus while theory-guided instrumentation expands the range of interpretive factors that are open to question when we get a negative outcome, it also expands our ability to acquire evidence and thereby increase the range of constraints on our theories. The paper ends with a discussion of the interaction between interpretation and constraint in two issues that Kuhn distinguished in his later writings: making reasonable choice between competing theories in an historical context and assessing whether a particular theory accurately describes its subject matter.

NORMATIVITY IN PERCEPTION (VII-B)

STEVEN CROWELL, RICE UNIVERSITY

Recently, in both analytic and phenomenological philosophy, there has been considerable debate over the content of perceptual acts. Some philosophers, such as John McDowell, argue that perception includes no “non-conceptual” content. What the empiricist tradition calls “impressions,” on this view, “already have conceptual content.” Or, using Kantian terms, “spontaneity is inextricably implicated in deliverances of receptivity.” While this does justice to the fact that perception is an intentional state—that it has a meaning; that it presents something “as” something—the view has seemed paradoxical (or at least too rationalistic) to some. The reason McDowell and others hold such a view is that it appears to them that if perception involves non-conceptual content it must lie outside the “space of reasons” and therefore be incapable of serving a justificatory role in knowledge. In other words, it could not stand in a normative, but only in a causal, relation to one’s judgment. The claim that the content of perception must be conceptual, therefore, is an answer to the question: What sort of normativity inheres in perception? From Husserl through Heidegger and Merleau-Ponty, phenomenologists have insisted that there is a non-conceptual aspect in perception that is nevertheless responsive to norms, that perceptual content can support counterfactuals (“if I were to go over there this thing would appear thus”) without being inferentially structured. In this paper I focus on Husserl, examining two attempts to describe the distinctive normativity in perception phenomenologically: an early theory that explicitly borrows resources from the logic of judgment and a later theory that tries to improve on the earlier by showing how the perceptual level of “passive synthesis” is the origin of conceptual normativity. In neither case, I argue, does Husserl successfully identify a content that is both non-conceptual and responsive to norms, but the reasons for his failure let us see why a phenomenology such as that of Heidegger or Merleau-Ponty—one that studies perception within the context of social practices and bodily skills—is more promising.

CONCEPT CALCULUS (III-D)

HARVEY FRIEDMAN, OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY

My presentation will focus on a particular recent development of Logic for Philosophy. We take ordinary commonsense notions and formulate basic principles about them which are immediately digestible to philosophers, and to a considerable extent, to ordinary thinkers, resulting in formal systems which are, in a precise sense, “formally equivalent to the axioms of mathematics through abstract set theory.” The relevant kind of equivalence here is that of mutual interpretability.

There is a great deal of flexibility in the choice of primitives and axioms in the formulation of such results. The emphasis, at this stage of the development, is not on arguing for the truth of particular axioms but, rather, revealing striking and unexpected logical structure in the most basic of informal commonsense notions.

Thus the findings indicate that the logical structure of commonsense notions is, in an appropriate sense, “equivalent” to the logical structure of standard mathematical notions, including the most “high powered” ones from abstract set theory.

In one of its most compelling guises, we use just the two informal primitive (nonlogical) concepts: “better than,” and “much better than,” in the context of ordinary (first order) logic with identity. We also discuss some contexts in naive physics, based on a naive physical quantity varying over naïve time.

One application of this development is the emergence of consistency proofs for mathematics by means of commonsense reasoning. Whether, and by what means, the principles of commonsense reasoning used are ultimately accepted as valid, remains to be seen and is beyond the scope of the presentation.

Although the formal systems based on such commonsense notions are entirely transparent, as well as the statements of the results, there is a considerable amount of high powered technical mathematical logic involved in proving these results. I will sharply limit any discussion of such technicalities.

VESTIGES OF INCOMMENSURABILITY IN DAVIDSON AND GADAMER? (III-C)

BARBARA FULTNER, DENISON UNIVERSITY

Are there vestiges of incommensurability in Davidson or Gadamer? Both deny that there could be incommensurable—i.e., mutually untranslatable—theories, languages, or conceptual schemes. Davidson rejects the scheme-content distinction, which he thinks the incommensurability thesis presupposes, on formal grounds. For Gadamer, language is the universal medium of understanding; understanding consists in the fusion of horizons; and horizons are essentially open and constantly shifting in a way conceptual schemes are not. Thus, he, too, rejects the scheme-content distinction, albeit for different reasons. Since incommensurability appeals to conceptual relativists insisting on irreducible differences between perspectives, what happens to difference absent incommensurability? In “On the Very Idea of a Conceptual Scheme,” Davidson argues that partial failure of translation no more yields incommensurability than complete failure. Nonetheless, he links translatability with intelligibility: the more we can translate, the more we can understand difference. Difference is intelligible only against a background of agreement. Similarly, Gadamer holds that differences can be articulated in languages of perspicuous contrast. Is this account of difference compatible with the later Davidson’s privileging of idiolect and does the emphasis on the individual, an analogue of which can also be found in Gadamer, reintroduce incommensurability? The later Davidson conceives communication as a constant flux of prior and passing theories of interpretation—analogous to the shifting of horizons. Unlike Davidson, who rejects the idea that speakers are able to communicate because they share a language governed by learned conventions, Gadamer distinguishes between an individualizing force in language, exemplified by poetry whose meaning defies translation, and a conventionalizing force, exemplified by universally accessible scientific discourse. If Gadamer is right that individualization implies untranslatability and untranslatability implies incommensurability, then we find vestiges of incommensurability in both Gadamer’s and Davidson’s individualized languages.

FOUCAULT’S COURSES AT THE COLLÈGE DE FRANCE (V-B)

FRÉDÉRIC GROS, UNIVERSITÉ DE PARIS XII

From 1981 to 1984, in his lectures at the College de France, Foucault set on elaborating two major concepts from ancient philosophy: the care of the self and free-speech (parrêsia). Our paper proposes to determine what philosophical effects arose from Foucault’s reflections.

First, there emerges a new conception of the subject, in opposition with the discourse traditionally held on subjectivity by Western philosophers from Descartes to Husserl, as well as with the prevailing techniques of confession. The question is not the foundation of knowledge nor the formation of some psychological intimacy.

Secondly, there emerges a new conception of truth. The production of truth doesn’t depend on epistemology, but ethics: truth requires courage rather than lucidity. When Foucault says that courage is the condition of truth, he intends to be in keeping with the Enlightenment. Besides, from this perspective, truth is no longer what should structure one’s discourse but what puts one’s life to the test. Stoicism and Cynicism offer two very different ways of dealing with the question of true life: in terms of harmony or scandal.

Last but not least, Foucault suggests a new conception of philosophy, defined as a free-speech rather than a true discourse. This free-speech implies a two-fold relation to the subject: it both engages the speaker and aims at transforming the listener. This free-speech always implies a relation of correlation and exteriority to the political field. Finally, this free-speech has nothing to do with science or rhetorics. Its aim is neither to demonstrate anything nor to persuade anyone. Philosophy, as a whole, is to be understood as a speech which introduces the difference of truth into the political game and therefore requires the transformation of the listener.

TORTURE, ASSASSINATION AND BLACKMAIL: EXCEPTIONALISM OR THE RULE? (VI-A)

MICHAEL GROSS, HAIFA UNIVERSITY-ISRAEL

Torture (aggressive interrogation), assassination (targeted killing), and blackmail (threatening civilians to deter terrorism) are morally and legally problematic but increasingly acceptable practices of war among stronger parties to an asymmetrical conflict. Two factors have precipitated this change: the collapse of the Soviet Union and the events of 9/11. The former gave rise to U.S. hegemony and the latter to offensive military action to protect American interests. In their wake, regional conflict has replaced bi-polar confrontation, leaving the U.S. and its allies to assume many of the tactics once reserved for counterinsurgency and “small” wars. Torture, assassination, and blackmail, formerly the purview of colonial warfare and internal armed conflict, now guide international armed conflict.

Torture, assassination, blackmail, and related practices of war differ significantly from traditional forms of armed conflict. Apart from being unlawful, they generally employ less destructive force than conventional warfare, aim to prevent or deter rather than repel aggression, blur the traditional distinction between combatant and noncombatant, and operate on the presumption of guilt rather than moral innocence. Nations adopting these practices face no small task as they defend or justify their actions. Some countries agree that torture, assassination, and blackmail are pernicious, but remain nonetheless defensible as a lesser evil. This is the ethics of exceptionalism: torture, assassination, and blackmail remain outside the law but are defensible practices during national emergencies. Yet if torture, assassination, and blackmail began their lives as exceptions to the established laws of conventional warfare, there are now signs that they are evolving from the exception to the rule thereby signifying the emergence of new norms of international behavior.

THE MISTAKE IN “I’LL BE GLAD I DID IT” REASONING: THE SIGNIFICANCE OF FUTURE DESIRES (III-F)

ELIZABETH HARMAN, PRINCETON UNIVERSITY

I realize that if I work on my paper rather than going out to a movie, then I’ll be glad I did it. I conclude that I should work on my paper. This looks like good reasoning. But suppose I have a baby born deaf, and I need to decide whether to cure his deafness. I know that if I don’t, he will grow up to be a deaf adult whose personality was profoundly shaped by his deafness. In the future, I will love him as the person he is, and I will not wish I had cured his deafness—I will be glad I acted as I did. Predicting this, I conclude that I should not cure my baby’s deafness. This looks like bad reasoning. Is “I’ll be glad I did it” reasoning good or bad? I argue that “I’ll be glad I did it” reasoning implicitly relies on this principle: Reflection for Desires: If a person believes that she will come to prefer that  $p$  be true, and she believes that she won't be in a worse epistemic or evaluative position at that time, then she should now prefer that  $p$  be true. (This is an analogue of a reflection principle for beliefs.) I argue that Reflection for Desires is false, so "I'll be glad I did it" arguments are never sound, though they sometimes employ good reasoning. I also argue that some common ethical arguments—including an argument against the permissibility of curing deafness in babies—fail because they implicitly rely on Reflection for Desires.

ON THE QUESTION OF REALISM IN MATHEMATICS (III-D)

PETER KOELLNER, HARVARD UNIVERSITY

In this talk I will consider claims of the form "there is no fact of the matter concerning  $P$ ." I will take special relativity as a model of such a claim. Here physical reasons are given for thinking that there is no fact of the matter concerning statements of the form " $A$  and  $B$  are (absolutely) simultaneous." I am interested in the question of whether an analogous situation can arise in mathematics.

It is often claimed that the independence methods in set theory already suffice to establish that there is "no fact of the matter" concerning certain mathematical statements (such as the Continuum Hypothesis), and some people maintain that although realism holds with regard to a certain fragment of mathematics (say first- and second-order arithmetic) there is a "bifurcation" at a higher level (say the level of third-order arithmetic, where the Continuum Hypothesis lives). What I would like to do in the talk is try to make sense of such claims. After arguing that the traditional arguments are problematic, I will present a precise scenario in which it would (arguably) be reasonable to say that "bifurcation" has occurred. The possibility of the scenario will rest on the failure of an outstanding conjecture in set theory (the  $\Omega$  Conjecture). The result is intended as just a sample of the sort of thing I have in mind. In general, the idea is to regiment claims of the form "there is no fact of the matter concerning  $P$ " (where  $P$  is mathematical) in such a way that they get mathematical traction.

ATTENTION AND CONSCIOUSNESS (VIII-C)

CHRIS MOLE, UNIVERSITY COLLEGE DUBLIN

Recent lines of psychological research purport to show that attention to the things before one is necessary for consciousness of them, and that consciousness of those things is not necessary for attention to them. These lines of research challenge the commonsense picture of the relationship between attention and consciousness. They also present problems for an appealing philosophical account of attention's metaphysics. When we take account of certain features of the epistemology of perception we can see that these lines of research are not successful: The philosophical account of attention's metaphysics can be defended and the commonsense picture of the relationship between attention and consciousness can be retained.

METAPHYSICS OF SYMMETRY (IV-J)SUNDAR SARUKKAI, NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF ADVANCED STUDIES–BANGALORE, INDIA*

Is symmetry a primary property of an object or a system? Quite often symmetry is not considered as a property and even when it is so understood, it is often as a derivative term, derivative to other primary properties such as shape. But symmetry has an ontological status and the metaphysics of symmetry allows us to inquire into the relation between symmetry and notions such as shape, causality, law, conserved properties, and so on. This paper also describes some philosophical issues that arise from a study of groups, which are the mathematical entities used to describe symmetry.

HOBBS AND THE REALLY BIG STICK: REPRESENTATION, INCORPORATION AND “ARTIFICE” IN THE CONSTRUCTION OF SOCIAL POWER (II-F)AMY SCHMITTER, UNIVERSITY OF ALBERTA*

Hobbes is many things to many people. But rarely is he appreciated as a theorist of social constructed reality. But I maintain that that is just what he is, and that we can find a remarkably sophisticated examination of how social construction works within his account of the metaphysics of power. I trace this account by considering Hobbes’s description of how the sovereign of a commonwealth functions as the “representative” of its people, transforming a “multitude of men” into one person, “a feigned or artificial person.” But sovereign power presents a bit of a puzzle: on the one hand, it is “artificial,” amassed through the collective cooperation of the individuals over whom it is exercised. On the other hand, no such cooperation is possible, Hobbes argues, in the absence of a common power of enforcement. So, the sovereign power that binds the aggregate into a unity seems both required for and constitutive of the very possibility of social cooperation. If Hobbes were trying to analyze how a commonwealth is built out of its constituent parts, then sovereignty would be his chicken and social covenants his egg; each must come first in the order of explanation, if the other is to come at all. But that is not what he is doing. Instead, I argue that he should be understood as tackling how the ontology of social institutions and political power enables both cooperation and artificial power through the operation of what he calls “representation.” The result is a thoroughly naturalistic, yet non-reductionist account of the emergence of power.

GADAMER AND DAVIDSON ON INCOMMENSURABILITY (III-C)DAVID VESSEY, UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO*

Donald Davidson is known for his rejection of the view that “there is a basic division between uninterpreted experience and an organizing conceptual scheme,” and as falls the “third dogma of empiricism” so falls the (very) idea there could be incommensurable conceptual schemes. Hans-Georg Gadamer also rejects the idea of incommensurable schemes, yet his talk of traditions, horizons, and languages as worldviews suggests he has just the kind of scheme/content account of the mind’s relation to the world Davidson argues against. I will show that in fact Gadamer does not have such an account. Once we see how Gadamer brings together the subjective, objective, and intersubjective differently from Davidson it will become clear that Gadamer has resources for arguing against incommensurability that Davidson lacks.

SONS OF THE EARTH: ARE THE STOICS METAPHYSICAL BRUTES? (II-D)

KATJA VOGT, COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY

The Stoics are regularly characterized as materialists. Traditionally, this label was used in a hostile spirit: the Stoics blasphemously deny the immaterial nature of the divine and of the soul. However, according to the Stoics, God and soul are corporeal, not material. Indeed, God is the first of the two basic principles of physics, the second of which is matter.

But perhaps more must be said about the Stoics' notion of corporeality if we want to see why the label "materialism" is unhelpful. The Stoics' focus on bodies—rather than "loftier" entities—might seem to make them the kind of metaphysical brutes that Plato's Sons of the Earth in the Sophist are. In agreement with earlier interpretations, I shall argue that the Stoics engage with the Sophist. But I shall emphasize the ways in which they depart from the position of the Sons of the Earth. The Stoics improve on the notion of corporeality that the Sons of the Earth propose. Bodies are things that touch each other, rather than, as the Sons of the Earth naively assume, things we can touch. For the Stoics, what we can touch is itself constituted by the blending of two corporeals: God and matter, or, an active and a passive corporeal.

The Stoics aim to bring together two important intuitions of ancient philosophy. (1) The universe is governed by God; soul is the source of action. (2) Only bodies can act or be acted upon. The Stoics insist on (1), without—as other ancient philosophers do—giving up on (2); this leads them into a revisionist (as opposed to brutish) metaphysical theory.

Next to a range of fragments on early Stoic philosophy, I shall draw on Plato's Sophist, Timaeus, and Philebus.

TRUTH AND REPARATIONS (VIII-B)

MARGARET WALKER, ARIZONA STATE UNIVERSITY

In this paper, I have two aims. First, and principally, I want to defend the idea that politically implemented modes of truth-telling both to, for, and by those who are victims of gross violation and injustice, may with good reason be counted as a kind of reparations. This does not require me to defend the idea that truth-telling by itself is sufficient reparation for serious wrongs, or that the effectiveness of orchestrated truth-telling as a form of reparations is independent of whether or not other forms of reparations are given. I both defend the idea that truth-telling can be a kind of reparations and make clearer why truth-telling is unlikely to be sufficient and is likely to be sensitive to the larger context of reparative activity and its social, political, and historical background. Second, I claim that truth-telling is a significant form of reparations in at least certain cases of historical injustice. In addition, it is a form of reparations not vulnerable to kinds of arguments, about counterfactuals and supercession, that most commonly meet proposals for material reparations for historical injustices.

THE GLOBAL CAREGIVER: IMAGINING WOMEN'S LIBERATION IN THE NEW MILLENIUM (VIII-A)

ALLISON WEIR, WILFRID LAURIER UNIVERSITY—CANADA

In this paper, I address the issue of “global care chains” in which relatively well-off women are “freed” to work in the paid workforce by employing poor women, often from the “Third World,” to care for their children, while these women must leave the care of their own children to women even poorer than themselves. I argue that these chains can be unlocked only by radical change: only by a shift in our definition of the ideal-typical person, and the citizen, from independent worker to interdependent caregiver. In this I follow Nancy Fraser’s model of the citizen as Universal Caregiver. But while Fraser’s argument is focussed on the achievement of gender equity in the nation state, I argue for a shift in focus and an expansion in scope. Following Cynthia Willett, I argue that to unlock global care chains, we need to begin from the situation of the immigrant careworker. Beginning from this perspective leads to a more complex model of care as a global issue: a model that can take into account not only the distribution of work but the redistribution of resources, with an understanding of care not only as work but also as a desired good. Finally, I defend this model as a model of freedom, or liberation.

THE ORIGINS OF CONCEPTS (V-F)

DAN WEISKOPF, UNIVERSITY OF SOUTH FLORIDA

Learning genuinely new primitive concepts—that is, concepts that are not simply combinations of old concepts—has been argued to be impossible. This has often been taken to support the radical nativist position that concepts are not learned by rational psychological processes but “triggered” by brute-causal processes. I argue that there are several psychological mechanisms that are both empirically well-attested and capable of supporting learning of new primitive concepts. Two such mechanisms involve language-guided learning and causal reasoning. I describe these mechanisms in some detail and then sketch a general framework for thinking about concept learning that covers its psychological, semantic, and epistemic functions. Finally, I defend this framework against the objection that it cannot produce genuinely new conceptual content by sketching a conception of the expressive power of a representational system and showing how the posited mechanisms can extend the range of contents such a system can entertain.

INFORMATION AND INSTRUCTIONS FOR JOB CANDIDATES

REQUIREMENTS FOR USING THE PLACEMENT SERVICE

1. You must be an APA member in order to use the Service. Placement is a benefit of membership for candidates, and there is no additional charge to use this service. Membership applications are available on the APA web site (www.apaonline.org) or by contacting the APA National Office (302) 831-1112, or at the Membership/Registration desk at the Meeting.

2. You MUST REGISTER for the MEETING in order to use the Service.
  - If you register in advance for the meeting and indicate that you will be a candidate (an advance registration form is located at the back of this issue), a candidate number will be assigned in the National Office and will appear on the back of your badge. You must pick up your badge from the APA Registration staff prior to using the Placement service.
  - If you register on-site for the meeting, present your badge to the Placement Staff, who will be available to assign you a candidate number in the “Placement Service” line.

WHAT TO BRING WITH YOU

1. Your copies of recent issues of Jobs for Philosophers.
2. Several copies of your curriculum vitae. If you run out of CVs at the meeting, the hotel has a copy center located in the Business Center.

HOW TO USE THE PLACEMENT SERVICE

After you have picked up your registration materials from the APA Registration staff, you are ready to use the Service. If you do not yet have a candidate number on the back of your badge, please go to the job candidates’ area in Essex A, B (Fourth Floor) to receive one.

JOB CANDIDATES’ AREA

Here you will find a file folder (mailbox) with your candidate number on it. All communications addressed to you during the meeting will be placed there. Your folder contains:

1. “Request for Interview” forms. Additional forms will be available from the Placement staff. Be sure that your Placement Number appears at the top of all forms.
2. A “Locator” form for you to list your name and hotel address. Please do not remove this form from your folder. This is used only in the event that we need to contact you during the meeting.

JOB POSTINGS

New jobs (not having appeared in the Jobs for Philosophers) will be posted on a bulletin board in the Placement Service Area. You should check this board regularly for new postings. Each ad should contain instructions on how to apply.

INSTITUTIONS THAT HAVE CHECKED IN WITH PLACEMENT

The names of institutions that have registered to use the Service will be posted on the bulletin board (updated regularly) in alphabetical order. Each listing will indicate the following:

1. If the listing institution has checked in with Placement.
  2. If the institution is accepting interview requests at the meeting.

3. The relevant JFP for the institution's opening(s).
4. Where the institution plans on interviewing (Table with number assignment).
5. Miscellaneous notes deemed appropriate by the Placement staff or the institution.

SUBMITTING AN INTERVIEW REQUEST FORM

Complete the top portion of the "Request for Interview" form and attach a copy of your CV. Be sure that your candidate number appears at the top of all forms. After you have completed the necessary information, place your request form and CV in the box marked Requests for Interviews which will be prominently displayed on the Placement Service Desk. Your "Request" will be forwarded to the institution by a staff member.

INTERVIEWS

After your "Request" has been reviewed by a representative from the institution, the form will be returned to your file folder with the institution's response appearing on the bottom of the form. Check your file folder often so that you can be certain to receive your messages promptly.

By Noon on December 30, all "Requests" submitted by you should have been returned to your file folder, and you should remove them at that time. Occasionally, an institution may retain applications to review at a later date. If you applied for a job that had been posted and the institution did not check in with the Service during the meeting, it is suggested that you contact the institution by mail.

INTERVIEWING LOCATIONS

Some departments will be conducting interviews at tables. Each institution using a table for interviewing will be assigned a table number. The table numbers assigned to institutions will be posted on the bulletin board in the Placement Service Area.

ADVICE FOR JOB APPLICANTS

The APA Committee on Career Opportunities offers the following advice for job applicants: The schedule for those seeking jobs and those Departments offering positions is difficult for all concerned. From the point of view of Departments, any publication date for Jobs for Philosophers is a compromise between the competing demands imposed by the need to get funding for positions, so the later the better, and by the need to have time to process applications, so the sooner the better. From the point of view of job applicants, there are also competing demands: the sooner it is published, the more time to apply, but the later it is published, the more opportunities will be available. There is no easy solution to this problem, but you can ease your difficulties somewhat by being prepared when the

JFP is published. You should have your curriculum vitae ready to put in an envelope, a generic draft of a letter of application ready to be fine-tuned for particular job opportunities, and the rest of your file ready for mailing. This means talking to those who are to write letters of recommendation long before the JFP is due to arrive, preparing material about your teaching capacities, and selecting a writing sample for those Departments that request it. Applications should be complete, as well as clearly organized. It is to your advantage to send in your application as soon as possible after an ad appears.

INFORMATION AND INSTRUCTIONS FOR INTERVIEWERS

REQUIREMENTS FOR USING THE PLACEMENT SERVICE

1. It is expected that all individual interviewers will register for the meeting either by using the registration form found in the back of this issue or by stopping at the APA Registration Desk to register on-site prior to using the Placement Service.
2. All Departments (not individuals) planning to interview at the meeting should complete the Placement Service advance registration form found on our web site, www.apaonline.org/apa/divisions/eastern or at the end of this section.

Upon receipt of an advance registration form additional information pertaining to the Placement Service will be sent to the attention of the contact person listed on the form. In the event that we send Placement forms either via email or mail, please be sure to complete these and return them to our office at your earliest opportunity. Not doing so may cause your materials to arrive after the Staff has already left the office to travel to the meeting. In this case, we must have you fill out the forms again on site. If time does not allow sending them to us, please bring them with you and turn them in at the Placement Desk.

CHECKING IN WITH THE SERVICE

Before you begin to interview candidates, please check in with the Placement Staff. We will need to know that you have arrived on site for candidates inquiring about your institution. Additional information will be requested from you (or confirmed if your department pre-registered) at this time as well.

Some institutions accept interview requests at the meeting; some of these job notices may have appeared in Jobs for Philosophers while others are unpublished positions. A new, unpublished position will be assigned an AD# and posted on the bulletin board in the Placement Service area. If you are bringing such a job notice with you to the meeting, please provide the Placement Staff with four copies of the notice for the position you are advertising. Such a position announcement should be typed on one side only in a good size and easy to read font, and be as brief as possible. Only positions that have not appeared in Jobs for Philosophers will be posted. If you would like a position that has been posted at this meeting to appear on our website immediately following the meeting, or in the issue of Jobs for Philosophers, you need to submit this ad immediately, following the close of the meeting via our website, www.apa.udel.edu/apa/publications/jfp/advertise.asp. If you need assistance with this, contact the APA National Office.

Some institutions interview by prearrangement after placing an advertisement in Jobs for Philosophers and then contacting candidates prior to the meeting. When you arrange an interview with candidates, please inform them that they must be APA Members in order to use the Service and they must register for the meeting in order to use the Service.

If you plan to conduct job interviews anywhere other than at the interviewing tables/suites we have provided, please let us know your plans because candidates often come to us to ask questions about the location/time (etc.) of their interviews, and we need to have complete, up-to-date information in order to help them (and you).

Departments using a Suite for interviewing will need to complete an interview schedule form at the time they check in with the Service. Doing so enables the Service to notify the candidates you wish to interview of your interviewing location. Be assured that only those candidates listed on your interview schedule will be told the location of your hotel room, unless you have directed us to give this information to all candidates who ask. Departments interviewing at tables DO NOT need to complete this form.

N.B.: If you are conducting interviews in a hotel room, please be aware of the following policy statement adopted by the APA Board of Officers at its November 2004 meeting:

“Departments should not conduct Job Interviews in non-suite hotel rooms. Candidates who are subject to such interviews can appeal to the APA and are guaranteed anonymity.” (Originally published in Proceedings and Addresses of the American Philosophical Association, Vol. 78, No. 5, pp. 23, 119.)

APA INTERVIEWING TABLES

The Placement Service provides numbered tables for interviewing purposes; you will receive your table number assignment when you check in. These table number assignments will also be posted on the Placement Service Bulletin Board. Should additional space for interviewing tables be necessary, this location will be posted as well.

INSTITUTION FILE FOLDER (MAILBOX)

There will be a file folder bearing the name of your institution. Requests for interviews from candidates will be placed in this file folder.

REVIEWING INTERVIEW REQUESTS

When a candidate requests an interview with your institution, you should receive her/his curriculum vitae attached to a “Request for Interview” form. The bottom of this form is to be completed by you and returned to

Placement staff. If an interview is granted, space is provided on this form to list the time, date, and location of the interview. If you are unable to interview a candidate, space for this response is also provided on the form. Any request you receive in an envelope contains confidential material and should be destroyed rather than returned to the candidate. As a matter of professional courtesy, all requests should receive a response. When a candidate receives a “Request” form back without a response, he or she is likely to assume that the material has not been reviewed and might return this to you via our service or contact your institution by mail.

Each candidate is assigned a numbered file folder to facilitate prompt communication between interviewers and candidates. Materials that you wish to transmit to a registered candidate should be handed in to the Placement Service staff located Essex C (Fourth Floor), and will be delivered to the candidate by our staff.

APA STATEMENT ON PLACEMENT PRACTICES

The APA Committee on the Status and Future of the Profession reminds you of its Statement on Placement Practices: The APA discourages the nomination by graduate departments of job seekers for positions in philosophy, and the submission of their dossiers in response to announcements of positions, without their knowledge or interest. This may seriously mislead those who are conducting searches, and may have unfortunate consequences both for them and for genuinely interested applicants. Graduate departments using a nomination procedure or submitting dossiers on behalf of job seekers should either attest explicitly that the candidate wishes to be considered for the positions in question, or (preferably) ensure that the job seekers themselves submit personal letters of application for these positions. Departments conducting searches are encouraged to recommend or require explicitly (in their position announcements) that each candidate, to be assessed of full consideration, should submit a personal letter of application for and interest in the announced position.

A Placement Ombudsperson will be available at the meeting. Please see the Placement Service Staff if you would like to contact the Ombudsperson.

MINUTES OF THE 2006 EASTERN DIVISION EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING

Present: Louise Antony, Kwame Anthony Appiah, Seyla Benhabib, Richard Bett, Bob Brandom, Daniel Garber, Jorge Garcia, Christine Korsgaard, David Rosenthal, Merold Westphal. Visitors: Stephanie Lewis, Ernest Sosa (items 1-8), David Schrader (items 1-9). Absent: Jerry Fodor.

The Executive Committee took the following actions at its meeting on December 27, 2006:

1. Approved the minutes of its previous meeting on December 27, 2005 (as published in Proceedings and Addresses volume 80, #1, September 2006, pp. 139-141).
  2. Received a report on other actions of Eastern Division committees during the 2006 calendar year, including the results so far of the experiment to expand the invited portion of the Eastern Division program, as agreed at the 2004 meeting; recommended to the Program Committee that this expanded invited program be continued beyond its initial two-year experimental period; and decided to leave vacant (for the remaining year of her term) Christine Korsgaard's at-large slot on the Executive Committee, should she win election to Vice President for 2007-8.
  3. Set the agenda for the 2006 Business Meeting.
  4. Heard reports from David Schrader, Executive Director of the Association, and Ernest Sosa, Chair of the Board of Officers, concerning actions at the 2006 Board meeting.
  5. Discussed the proposed revised Bylaws of the Association in preparation for their presentation at the Business Meeting, and decided to recommend to the Business Meeting that they be sent to mail ballot without amendment and that members vote to approve them.
  6. Received a report on the Division's financial situation.
  7. Reconsidered the question of providing travel funding and accommodation for a few foreign invited speakers. The following policy was decided on concerning the main program: Up to four distinguished overseas philosophers in the invited portion of the program may be offered funding for travel (using an economy round-trip ticket from a speaker's home airport to the convention city) and accommodation (for a maximum of four nights in the convention hotel) on an ad hoc basis, provided that a) the speakers have less than full funding for these purposes from their institutions and b) the total amount expended in any given year does not exceed $10,000. This plan is to be adopted on a three-year experimental basis. The following policy was decided on concerning overseas participants in sessions sponsored by the APA

Committee on International Cooperation: Up to two speakers per year may be offered funding for travel and accommodation, provided that the total amount expended in any given year does not exceed $5,000, and subject to the other conditions mentioned above.

8. Approved the 2006-2007 Divisional budget, including a contribution to the National Office of $7,000 towards the cost of the Philosophy in a New Key Summer Institute (PIKSI) for 2007. In addition, the following decisions were made: a) Beginning in the 2007-2008 fiscal year, $25,000 per year, for three years, is to be made available to the National Office to fund projects that are to the benefit of the profession, in accordance with the policies and procedures then in effect for proposals submitted to the APA Board of Officers. Each year the National Office shall submit a report on proposals funded that year; the Executive Committee shall review this report and shall have the option of extending funding for an additional year beyond the years for which a commitment has already been made. (The Eastern Division will thus be committed to this funding for a maximum of three years at any given time, and the National Office will have at least two years' notice if it is decided not to continue such funding.) b) A one-time gift of $25,000 is to be made to the National Office in the 2006-2007 fiscal year to help with the funding of its database improvement project.
  9. Authorized the Secretary-Treasurer to negotiate a contract with the Marriott Wardman Park hotel for the 2011 Eastern Division meeting.
  10. Decided on a procedure for selecting future Dewey Lecturers, as follows: Nominations are to be solicited by means of a notice in the program, on the APA web site and in the materials sent with the annual Eastern Division ballots; this notice should include a statement of the purpose of the Dewey Lectures, and should specify a deadline that will allow the list of nominees to be circulated to the Executive Committee in advance of its annual meeting, at which a decision will be made on the Dewey Lecturer for the meeting two years forward. In addition, a ranked list of possible invitees was decided on for the 2008 Dewey Lecturer.
  11. Recognized as affiliated groups the Society for the History of Political Philosophy and the Society for Arab, Persian and Islamic Philosophy, provided that membership in these groups is open to all APA members. In addition, it was decided that a) the Hermann Cohen Gesellschaft should be permitted to be listed as a co-sponsor of group sessions (where the other group in question is a regular Eastern Division affiliate group), and will be considered for recognition as a regular Eastern Division affiliate group upon submission of its bylaws and provided it meets the usual conditions for such recognition (including the one mentioned above); and b) The Viktor von Weizsäcker Gesellschaft should be permitted to be listed as a co-sponsor of group sessions (where the other group in question is a regular Eastern Division affiliate group), and be informed that regular Eastern Division affiliate group status is not required for such co-sponsorship.
  12. Received a report on the winners of Divisional awards and prizes.

13. Nominated four candidates for two positions on the 2007 Nominating Committee. They are Michael Della Rocca, Gilbert Harman, Terry Pinkard, and Michael Williams.
  14. After receiving suggestions from the Committee on Committees, established a list of candidates and alternates for membership on the 2008 Program Committee and instructed the Secretary-Treasurer to form a committee from that list plus the list of continuing members.
  15. After receiving suggestions from the Committee on Committees, established a list of candidates and alternates for membership on the Advisory Committee to the Program Committee and instructed the Secretary-Treasurer to form a committee from that list plus the list of continuing members.

Respectfully submitted,

Richard Bett

ELECTION RESULTS

RESULTS OF EASTERN DIVISION ELECTIONS

As a result of the mail ballot that took place in the spring of 2007, the following Eastern Division members have been elected to office in the Eastern Division.

- Christine Korsgaard has been elected to the office of Vice President for 2007-2008. Professor Korsgaard will become President for 2008-2009 without further election.
- Nancy Sherman has been elected to the office of Divisional Representative for 2007-2010.
- Don Garrett and Cynthia Willett have been elected as members-at-large of the Executive Committee for 2007-2010.
- Gilbert Harman and Terry Pinkard have been elected as members of the Nominating Committee for 2007-2009.

In addition, the Proposed Revised Bylaws of the APA were approved in the Eastern Division by a vote of 483-23. The same Proposed Revised Bylaws were also approved in the summer of 2007 in the Pacific Division, by a vote of 147-4, and had already been approved in the Central Division in the summer of 2006 by a vote of 295-12. Since all three Divisions have now voted to approve identical versions of the Proposed Revised Bylaws, they take effect, replacing the previous APA Constitution and By-Laws. (For details of the changes, see Proceedings and Addresses volume 80, #3 (January 2007), pp. 221-37.)

APA REGISTRATION POLICY

It is the policy of the APA that all persons attending sessions, including those who are participating as speakers, commentators or session chairs, are required to register for each meeting they attend. In addition, we have always recommended that all participants wear their APA badges during session hours to identify themselves as registered participants. In an effort better to enforce this policy we have begun a system of checking meeting attendees, randomly and anyone whom we suspect might not be registered, for proof of registration. If you are asked to provide proof of registration and are unable to do so, you will be asked to register immediately in order to enable you to attend sessions. Registration fees help subsidize every divisional meeting. Without that income we will be unable to ensure the quality and excellence of our meetings which you have come to expect. We thank you for your continued cooperation.
