I have resigned as chair of the Committee on Non-Academic Careers. But the one thing I came up with is the very obvious Chronicle for Higher Education. There are various issues devoted to different subjects: teaching, administration, etc. If there is going to be a desk at the meetings this could simply be posted as a suggestion for students.

Somebody on the committee suggested writing to department chairs (or secretaries) to ask what various jobs graduate student had found. This idea could be resurrected.

Graduate students should also be encouraged to do the obvious things: keep their minds open about administrative jobs, teaching in med. schools (if they have taken the relevant courses, medical ethics), high schools -- tutoring, etc. Looking at want-ads in places like NYRB.
