I. Names and Affiliations

The SOPHIA project steering committee for this grant proposal consists of:

Dr. Douglas Anderson, Trustee of SOPHIA and Professor of Philosophy at Southern Illinois University Carbondale, Carbondale, IL.

Dr. John J. McDermott, Trustee of SOPHIA, Distinguished Professor of Philosophy and Humanities and Abell Professor of Liberal Arts, Texas A & M University, College Station, TX.

Dr. John Robert Shook, Fellow of SOPHIA, Research Associate in Philosophy, Philosophy Department, State University of New York, University at Buffalo, New York.

Dr. Eric Thomas Weber, Executive Director and Trustee of SOPHIA and Principal Investigator for this proposal, Assistant Professor, Department of Public Policy Leadership, The University of Mississippi, 105 Odom Hall, University, MS, 38677, 662.915.1336 (office), 662.915.1954 (fax), etweber@olemiss.edu.

If you have any questions regarding this proposal, please contact Dr. Weber.

II. Account of the Project's Purpose and Timeline

Purpose. The purpose of the project “Democracy and Civic Participation: Two Symposia on Philosophy and Public Engagement” is to bring together philosophers and non-philosophers to talk about interests and problems in common involving citizen engagement. The guiding idea behind this project is the motivation of SOPHIA. As an organization, SOPHIA aims to broaden the potential for academic philosophers to demonstrate their value outside the ivory tower, and to pursue new opportunities for professional philosophers, such as in writing, consulting, and other applications of critical thinking. SOPHIA is currently seeking large grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities and other funding sources. Thus, the present grant proposal is intended to serve as a seed project for larger grants and as a match for funds we have obtained already. This year we will also be developing a short guidebook, which could be posted on the APA Web site or on our own, that will list the steps necessary to put on a SOPHIA-style event. It is different from more common conferences, fostering conversation with relevant persons/parties who come from outside of university settings. We also help our communities in the form of continuing education credits, which in turn help us to attract greater participation from interested persons.

One more element of SOPHIA's mission is distinctive. The founders of SOPHIA believed that the traditional way in which academic philosophers initiate dialogue at professional conferences is not ideal for interaction with persons who are not scholars. Generally, philosophers present argumentative papers, often reading them to other philosophers with the hope of hearing challenges to their views. With these critiques, scholars then sharpen their arguments and contribute to debates among a small group of other professional academics. SOPHIA's aim is to encourage a different kind of dialogue, one in which organized, directed, and focused conversations are the format for meetings. When people present papers at professional conferences, presenters are the ones who fundamentally frame the debates discussed. By contrast, SOPHIA events involve dialogue which works to set the terms of debate as a group, allowing many voices to participate in the descriptions of the problems we will address through conversation. Also, our events bring together philosophers and non-philosophers, reaching beyond the academy to promote conversation beyond traditional academic settings.

SOPHIA's workshops aim to initiate conversations that we hope will continue long after our events are over. When we start conversations, we form relationships. These can continue in writings for broader audiences, collaborative work through consultancy, and more. Two examples make the point. First, Dr. Weber in Mississippi this year has been offered a regular contract to write for the state's major newspaper, The Clarion Ledger. Also, in 2009, Dr. Ralph Didlake, M.D., attended our "Ethics at the End of Life" symposium, which the APA supported, and has had a continuing relationship with Dr. Weber and the Oxford campus of the University of Mississippi. Dr. Didlake, who is at the university's Medical Center campus in Jackson, MS, currently has two students from the Oxford campus working with him in medical ethics fellowships for the summer. Dr. Didlake is also working to offer SOPHIA funding to support our program in 2011, which we hope to put toward travel support for philosophers.

SOPHIA intends to host two events, one at the University of Mississippi and the other at the State University of New York at Buffalo. The first of these symposia will be held in February of 2011 at the University of Mississippi, in Oxford, MS, on the subject of philosophy and disabilities. The title for the event is to be "Disability, Civic Responsibility, and Community Friendship." As our key facilitator, we will have Dr. Anita Silvers of San Francisco State University lead our discussion. We will also have Dr. Nancy Tuana of Pennsylvania

State University as a co-facilitator for the event. Dr. Weber will organize the event on campus and will promote it extensively beforehand. He will also be applying for continuing education credits to be offered through the event for medical doctors, nurses, school teachers, social workers, lawyers, insurance agents, and realtors, all of who confront challenges involving disabilities and available services in small town America, and all of whom need continuing education credits. We currently have approval to issue some of these credits already. With incentives like these, we will have a substantial turn out at the event. Dr. Andy Mullins, Executive Assistant to the Chancellor at the university, has assured Weber that we will attract several state legislators to the event, given their experience and interests in advocacy for persons with disabilities. Topics for this event will be drawn from the communications we are already receiving from school teachers and other community members about the challenges of addressing special needs in Oxford, a small, rural town.

The second symposium, which Dr. Shook will organize, will concern citizen engagement and democratic access to the formation of public policy. The event is in early planning stages for the summer of 2011, to be scheduled for either June or July. Dr. Shook will bring together philosophers, scholars from other disciplines, as well as members and leaders of the community and representatives of local non-government organizations in Buffalo, NY. The tentative title for this event is “Philosophy and Democratic Engagement in Public Policy.” Dr. Shook, who specializes in democratic philosophy and who has a great deal of experience organizing events for the Center for Inquiry in Amherst, NY, will be finalizing details regarding a facilitator for the event in the next few months. Buffalo, NY, deals with a number of the problems for rural America that occur in Oxford, MS, as well, such as limited access to government and social services. The event in Buffalo will offer leaders a chance to come together to talk, guided by philosophical scholars, about how to overcome obstacles to civic participation in rural New York.

The key to these and to all SOPHIA-sponsored events is our aim to share with non-philosophers what scholars have to offer about important issues and to learn from practitioners and affected persons about new worries and real problems that impact people. These goals serve to broaden the appeal of professional philosophers beyond the academy and to provide a source of subject matter for further scholarly study.

Timeline. The first symposium, “Disability, Civic Responsibility, and Community Friendship,” will take place at the end of February, 2011. The second event, the “Philosophy and Democratic Engagement in Public Policy,” will be hosted in June or July of 2011. A report on each event will be drafted within three months after each workshop.

 This column may change in the next few months, given that the idea for this symposium has been developed recently.

Budget Narrative. Leaders of SOPHIA are currently seeking funding from the National Endowment for the Humanities for larger projects that will build on the format and connections fostered at these events. In particular, this year we will be applying for a Media Makers Development Grant from the Division of Public Programs and for a Collaborative Research Grant from the Research Division of the NEH. A grant from the APA would offer additional evidence that SOPHIA’s work is considered valuable to the profession and brings value to constituencies beyond the university from the field of Philosophy.

Beyond these larger grant activities, SOPHIA will be seeking support from the Mississippi Humanities Council to help fund our event in Oxford, MS. Our event will require greater resources than others we have organized given the great likelihood that we will attract many participants with special needs due to disabilities. We ask for support for travel for that event, “Disability, Civic Responsibility, and Community Friendship,” given the expense involved, for example, in securing a handicap accessible van and trained driver who will be needed for accommodating our keynote and facilitator, Dr. Silvers, as well as any other participants who may need it. We hope that the Mississippi Humanities Council will help us to support the travel of philosophers to our event, given the tight budgets that so many have for travel. Dr. Weber has been encouraged to submit a proposal for a grant from the MHC for such support given his history with the organization, which has been successful. We will have a sign-language interpreter at the event in Oxford, which will be sponsored through the university’s funds. We will also seek similar support for the event in Buffalo, NY, as we make more progress in organizing that event.

For food and beverages at each event, we are budgeting a total of $1,000, to include a basic continental breakfast, a simple lunch, and coffee and other simple beverages throughout the day. To each event, SOPHIA has committed $500, which will support food costs and a small amount of travel support for philosophers who have limited travel funds.

Meeting rooms at each event will be provided by the relevant universities as contributions in kind. Also, parking tags for visitors will be offered, whose value we have estimated at $10 per participant, with the expectation of 50 participants needing the tags.

Finally, our workshop organizers include one assistant professor and one senior scholar. The listing in the budget tables for organizers refers to in-kind contributions to these projects that roughly estimate the value of each organizer's salary plus benefits for the time taken to organize each event.

In total, we are requesting a total of $5,000 from the APA, to provide roughly 16% of the funds for the event in Oxford, MS and 25% of the budget for the event in Buffalo. It is our aim to offer philosophers a new way to think about what they do and to share with people outside of academic philosophy department the value of philosophers' scholarship. The support of the APA would be of great help in advancing these initiatives and for planting the seed from which our organization will grow.

IV. Designation of the Fiscal Agent

Given that the principal investigator for this grant is Dr. Eric Thomas Weber at the University of Mississippi, the fiscal agent for this grant application is:

Nina Jones, Director of Accounting, Accounting, The University of Mississippi, 318 Martindale, University, MS 38677, nina@olemiss.edu, 662.915.7078 (phone).

V. Information about Other Funding Obtained or Sought

Current funding sources. At the time this proposal is drafted, SOPHIA has three sources of funds. The first is its own resources, committing $500 per symposium. The remaining sources of funds are each home institution for the respective symposia: The University of Mississippi and the State University of New York at Buffalo. Funds from these institutions will be provided in-kind in terms of rooms, parking, and salaries for the workshop organizers. Also, the University of Mississippi event has secured support from the Department of Philosophy, the Department of Public Policy Leadership, the Department of Political Science, the Office of Disability Services, with further sources to come.

Future funding sources. Dr. Weber will be soliciting further support for the workshop at the University of Mississippi, such as from the Sally McDonnell Barksdale Honors College, the Dean's Office of the College of Liberal Arts, the University Medical Center, the Office of Research and Sponsored Programs, and the Provost's Office. Where possible, funds will be made available to support philosophers' travel and hotel stay for the event, given the tightened budgets that many are dealing with today. Plus, as said above, we will apply for support from the Mississippi Humanities Council. We may also seek support from the New York Council for the Humanities for the event in Buffalo.

Beyond these sources, SOPHIA is applying this year for more than one large grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, given SOPHIA's focus on philosophers in America and its interest in the impact of humanities scholarship on the lives of citizens. Future projects and workshops would be developed also to support the expansion of opportunities for professional philosophers with the support of the NEH especially.

VI. Promotional Plan

For each event, we will seek wide participation from members of the local communities, in Oxford, MS and Buffalo, NY. Several months before each event, we will submit notices via electronic outlets to let scholars know about the upcoming program, to encourage them to plan travel to our events. We will next draft press releases to send to our local newspapers and radio and television news outlets to alert the public of the upcoming event one month before and then two weeks before. Then, we will once again send out announcements and post information at the respective universities two days before the event.

Aside from these promotional strategies, we will seek spots on local television news shows, such as one with which Dr. Weber has connections – the Memphis Live at Nine show, where he promoted a University of Mississippi event in 2010. Outlets such as these are always looking to fill spots with interesting information about events and opportunities for their viewers. For an example, visit Weber’s the “Public Engagment” page on his Web site (<http://www.EricThomasWeber.org>), where you can watch the video of such an interview online.

Finally, one of the greatest successes in inspiring participation, beyond the successful press releases that worked well in Oxford, MS in 2009 (for the SOPHIA symposium the APA funded then), was the offering of continuing education credits. The first step in this process is to apply for the ability to offer continuing education credit for attendance at our event. As an example, Dr. Weber has secured all the forms necessary to apply for credits for teachers, doctors, nurses, social workers, lawyers, insurance agents, and realtors. Members of each of these groups need continuing education credits, which we can offer for the subject of ethics and disabilities. We have already secured the ability to offer credits for lawyers, given that our institution is preapproved through our office of continuing education. That office will help us with the application process for other forms of credit, which is one of the ways that state universities demonstrate their value to the citizens of the state. It is difficult in rural communities to gain access to programs that yield continuing credits, so possible participants often jump at the opportunity when they see it. Also, the persons involved have direct experience working on the subjects for which they seek such professional credits..

VII. Product as Aid to Philosophers

One of the enduring products that will come out of this grant will be a document that lays out the steps that are required to put on a SOPHIA-style event. One of SOPHIA's purposes is to encourage philosophers to try a new way to do philosophy – a way that encourages and enables engagement with groups outside of philosophy departments and beyond universities. This year, with the help of the American Philosophical Association, we will develop a short guide to organizing a SOPHIA-style symposium. It will lay out the kinds of sources to approach for funding, the process of choosing a topic on which philosophers have a great deal to contribute and about which external constituencies can inform and help philosophers. It will also address the ways in which our meetings are generally conducted, which have been extremely well received, plus the methods used to garner a great deal of interest and participation in our events, through promotional tools and incentives like continuing education credits, food, travel support, and more. Finally, the document we will produce will also speak to the possibilities and methods for continuing relationships beyond SOPHIA symposia, such as the relationship Dr. Weber developed with Dr. Ralph Didlake of Jackson, MS, as well as potential for developing recurring programs of continuing education.
