In summer 2019, I submitted an application for $1,000 to support the open access publication of Curiosity Studies: A New Ecology of Knowledge (University of Minnesota Press, April 2020). The American Philosophical Association was kind enough to award $750 toward the project.

The full cost of the open access publication was $7,500. I, along with my co-editor Arjun Shankar (now at Georgetown University), were able to raise the complete funds as follows:

- $3,000 Open Access Funding Award (American University), awarded
- $3,000 Publication Subvention Grant (Colgate University), awarded
- $750 Dean’s Funding (University of Pennsylvania), awarded
- $750 Berry Fund (American Philosophical Association), awarded

The open access publication can be viewed here: https://manifold.umn.edu/projects/curiosity-studies.

Acknowledgement of support from the Berry Fund is listed on the open access book’s website, as well as on the printed book’s copyright page.

My co-editor and I are very grateful for the support from the APA and we trust that the book has and will expand the reach and meaning of public philosophy.
