Introduction

The first half of this course surveys some of the most influential figures in western political thought: Hobbes, Locke, Rousseau and Rawls. We will focus primarily on their justifications of the state, their defenses of individual liberty, and their understandings of political community. The second half of the course will address questions of racial oppression and marginalisation from a contemporary perspective, taking the recent events in Ferguson as a focal point. Throughout the course we will consider whether and how the classic texts of political philosophy offer insight into contemporary US political issues.

Required Materials

3. Additional readings will be available on the Husky CT page for this course. If you have trouble accessing Husky CT, please contact the help desk (486-1187)

Assessment

There are five components to the assessment for this class:

1. Argument Reconstructions and Objections
2. Reflective pieces
3. Long Essay
4. Midterm/Final
5. Class Participation

Each of these forms of assessment will be testing a different philosophical skill. Since there are many different ways to be a good philosopher, I do not expect you to be able to excel at all of these. As such, only your best two forms of assessment will count towards your final grade, and each of these will be weighted at 50%. In order to get a passing grade, you must attempt each of the first three forms of assessment. What counts as an attempt is detailed below.
• Argument Reconstructions and Objections
  o This assessment tests your ability to clearly articulate the content of a philosophical argument, and identify an objection to it. For the week’s reading you must first identify one claim that the philosopher makes. Your second task is to summarise the argument the philosopher puts forward to justify that claim. This can be done as a formal argument reconstruction, or as an informal summary. Your third task is to develop an objection to that argument. The objection should constitute at least half of the paper.
  o Recommended length: 750 words per paper
  o Due date: Fridays, midnight.
  o Submissions: Submit your papers through Husky CT. You may submit as many weeks as you wish; your best three papers will count, and they will be equally weighted. A single on-time submission by October 3 counts as an attempt at this assessment.

• Reflective Pieces
  o This assessment tests your ability to draw creative connections between philosophical theories and everyday life. Your task is to write a short piece explaining how the theories we are covering in class relate to a particular current event in the US or abroad. While there are no restrictions on how you do this, a couple of ways to approach this assessment would be a) to show how a particular theory helps make sense of a current event; or b) to show how a current event raises doubts about a particular theory.
  o Recommended length: 750 words per paper
  o Due date: Fridays, midnight
  o Submissions: Submit your papers through Husky CT. You may submit as many weeks as you wish; your best three papers will count, and they will be equally weighted. A single on-time submission by October 3 counts as an attempt at this assessment.

• Essay
  o This assessment tests your ability to engage in extended philosophical analysis, and to develop an original line of argument. Before writing your paper will need to decide on your own essay topic, submit a one page essay plan, and meet with me to discuss the direction of your paper. There are no restrictions on the topic you write on, provided it connects in some way to the class materials.
  o Recommended length: 2500 words
  o Due date: Essay plan: October 31
                     Final essay: November 30
  o Submissions: You may submit as many essays as you like; your best essay will count. Submitting an essay plan on-time counts as attempting this assessment.

• Midterm/Final
  o This assessment tests your ability to develop a close understanding of the course materials. Both the midterm and the final will be composed of multiple choice questions; short answer questions; and an argument reconstruction. The midterm will be an online, open-book exam with a 1.5 hour time limit. It will be worth 20%. The final will be a 2 hour closed-book exam. It will be worth 30%. Both exams will be difficult.

- Provisional Dates:
  - Midterm: Available online Oct 5-10
  - Final: Friday December 12, 10:30-12:30

- Class Participation
  - This assessment tests your ability to develop philosophical arguments and objections orally, and to facilitate productive philosophical conversation with your classmates. Conversation during office hours can count towards your class participation grade.
  - Please note: I will be giving very few class participation grades above C.

Academic Misconduct and Plagiarism

Academic Misconduct in any form is violation of the University of Connecticut Student Code and will not be tolerated. Depending on the act, a student could receive an F grade on a test/assignment, an F grade for the course, and could be suspended or expelled from the University. For more details, please see the Student Code at http://www.community.uconn.edu/student_code.html

Disabilities

The Center for Students with Disabilities (CSD) at UConn provides accommodations and services for qualified students with disabilities. If you have a documented disability for which you wish to request academic accommodations and have not contacted the CSD, please do so as soon as possible. The CSD is located in Wilbur Cross, Room 204 and can be reached at (860) 486-2020 or at csd@uconn.edu. Detailed information regarding the accommodations process is also available on their website at www.csd.uconn.edu.

Policies concerning Make-Up Exams

Exams must be taken at the date and time that is given for the exam. Exceptions will only be made under the following conditions: (i) you contact me before the exam to discuss the circumstances of your absence, and (ii) you supply the proper supporting documentation immediately upon your return (proper documentation includes doctors’ notes stating explicitly that you had to miss an exam or a note from the Dean in the case of personal emergencies). Failure to comply with the above conditions will result in an automatic zero on the exam.

Important Numbers

University can be a difficult time in life, but there are many services on campus that are set up to help you. The following are good sources to turn to in case of any difficulties, either academic or personal:

- Counseling and Mental Health Services: 486-4705 (after hours: 486-3427) or www.cmhs.uconn.edu
- Alcohol or Other Drug Services: 486-9431 or www.aod.uconn.edu
