

Duncan Clark Awardee

Barry S. Levy, MD, MPH

1998

Barry S. Levy, MD, MPH, a public health consultant and adjunct professor at the Tufts University School of Medicine. Levy's distinguished career includes posts as an epidemiologist with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), a professor at the University of Massachusetts Medical School, where he founded and directed the Occupational Health Program, a project director with the U.S. Agency for International Development and the Carter Center and executive director of the International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War.

Levy has worked in more than 20 countries, including Kenya, Thailand, Jamaica, China and Eastern Europe. After graduating with honors from the Tufts College of Liberal Arts, Levy went on to earn a master's in public health from the Harvard School of Public Health and a medical degree from Cornell University Medical College. As APHA president in 1997, Levy visited all 50 states, spoke frequently on the future of public health and the public's health needs and traveled to South Africa to present the APHA Presidential Citation to Nelson Mandela.

Levy has authored more than 150 papers and book chapters and co-edited 12 books, including an occupational and environmental health textbook, the APHA handbook "Preventing Occupational Disease and Injury," "War and Public Health," "Terrorism and Public Health" and "Social Injustices in Public Health." He co-wrote and performs in "Damaged Care," a musical comedy about health care in America.