The Interprofessional Prevention Education Service Learning project is designed to promote Prevention Education in the areas of Physical Fitness, Preventive Screening, Nutrition, and Making Healthy Choices. Each year, over 480 first-year students at Rosalind Franklin University from 8 healthcare professional programs complete interprofessional service projects in these areas as part of the required Interprofessional Healthcare Teams course.