The Schack Institute of Real Estate (Schack) at the NYU School of Professional Studies (NYU SPS) invites applications for the combined role of a full-time non-tenure faculty position and Academic Director for US domestic master’s degrees beginning January 2020 or September 2020.

Reporting to Schack’s Associate Dean, the Academic Director will be responsible for the management and development of the academic curriculum for master’s degrees offered from Schack’s New York City location, oversight and ongoing communication with clinical and adjunct faculty and advising staff, development and implementation of academic policies and procedures, and management of student services and co- and extracurricular programming.

Faculty appointments are for nine months and are renewable based on performance. Academic Director appointments are concurrent appointments that run for 11 months and are independently renewable annually based on performance. The rank of the faculty position will depend on experience and qualifications. Schack currently has a particular interest in recruiting faculty with backgrounds in real estate finance and investment, construction and development, urbanism, real estate entrepreneurship and innovation, technology and data analytics, and Chinese real estate markets.

Full-time faculty are active contributors to the research and pedagogical missions of the Institute and are expected to teach three degree courses per semester. This teaching load will be reduced for the Academic Director. In addition to teaching, each full-time faculty member assists with student advising and activities, curriculum planning, applied research, mentoring adjunct faculty, and nurturing industry relationships.

The successful candidate will hold a doctorate or other terminal degree (ABDs will be considered), preferably in economics, applied economics, urban economics, finance, real estate, or a related field. Ideal candidates will have experience in degree program management and faculty management, and a record of industry engagement and excellence in teaching in a selective university environment.

About the Schack Institute

The Schack Institute of Real Estate was founded in 1967 at the initiative of prominent members of the New York City real estate community. They encouraged NYU to establish an academic center that would provide a world-class education for industry professionals. More than 50 years later, Schack is at the forefront of real estate education and is recognized globally as one of the world’s leading centers of real estate research and pedagogy. In addition to the New York campus, the Institute recently announced a major expansion into China.

Across the Institute’s graduate degree programs—notably the MS in Real Estate, the MS in Construction Management, and the MS in Real Estate Development—as well as a rapidly expanding undergraduate degree program, enrollment has grown to more than 800 full- and part-time students from across the United States and nearly 50 other countries. In addition to its flagship degree programs, thousands of working professionals enroll in the Schack Institute’s executive education and career advancement programs each year.

An anchor of real estate academia’s engagement with industry, the Institute is home to the REIT Center, the Center for the Sustainable Built Environment, and the recently established Urban Lab. In addition, the Institute hosts global industry events, including annual conferences on real estate capital markets, the REIT sector, and women in real estate. Under the direction of the Schack Institute’s faculty, ongoing applied research at the Institute spans an exceptional range of issues in real estate development and investment, urban economics, and market structure and regulation.
