BDPA Announces New Board Leadership – William Carter

Supporting IT Professionals from the classroom to the boardroom

CINCINNATI, OH – BDPA Cincinnati chapter is a nonprofit organization made up of racially diverse information technology professionals, today announced new officers and members of its board of directors. William Carter was named the director of the chapter’s Planning Department. William Carter is the co-founder of Collaborative New Ventures ... a crowdfunding venture created to build businesses in the greater Cincinnati area. He has experience working as a technical engineering manager at a variety of companies, including Procter & Gamble. William received his Mechanical Engineering degree from Tuskegee University.

"We have to care enough about our collective future to not only demand change, recognize successful change, and dream of how good life will be if we could experience change, but rather we must take collective action to become the great change that we were created to be," says new director, William Carter.

In his new role, William works with a team of volunteers to handle all aspects of all strategic planning process. He is responsible to design and implement processes to help local chapter complete strength, weakness, opportunities and threat analysis on its own operation. His analysis will form the basis for both a 3-5 year strategic plan as well as a 1-year business plan.

“We are very excited about adding William to the BDPA Cincinnati Board of Directors. He brings a variety of experiences and a diverse background in IT along with a passion for the success of the mission of the BDPA organization,” said BDPA Cincinnati chapter president Dalric Webb. “I look forward to working with him to grow our chapter and community.”

BDPA Cincinnati chapter is the second-largest chapter in the nation. The chapter meets on the 3rd Wednesday of each month. In fact, the chapter meets next on Wednesday, November 19 to discuss ‘Insights through Data Visualization’ at Brown Mackie College (1011 Glendale Milford Road; Cincinnati OH 45215) - http://www.meetup.com/TechLife-Cincinnati/events/211504332/.
