

California lags behind in providing accessible inpatient mental health care to our most vulnerable youth: Patient discharge data from across the state reveals that California youth under 12 must travel more than six times the national average to seek inpatient mental health care. Counties with the longest travel times to care are highlighted below.

