Canadian Pain Society and Taylor & Francis announce publishing partnership

The Canadian Pain Society is pleased to announce the launch of a new open access journal broadly aimed at all aspects of pain research. The Canadian Journal of Pain will cover basic science, multidisciplinary clinical research, and knowledge implementation science.

Dr. Joel Katz of York University in Toronto, Canada has been appointed the journal's inaugural Editor-in-Chief.

"Thanks to the CPS Board of Directors and their tireless efforts, we're delighted to have found a new home with Taylor & Francis," Dr. Katz said. "The new Canadian Pain Society journal will give our members a trustworthy, high quality outlet for their research and, at the same time, allow the journal to showcase the research of our many talented members."

"Dr. Katz's vision and energy will no doubt make this venture a great success," said Director Jeffrey Mogil on behalf of the Canadian Pain Society. "We encourage all Canadian Pain Society members to congratulate Dr. Katz, and submit their work to what we predict will be a first-class venue for the publication of the latest and greatest in pain research and treatment."

The journal welcomes manuscripts from all over the world and has waived publication fees for the first year of publication.

"Our open access journal aims to publish cutting-edge information about new developments in the field of pain in a timely manner so authors can expect a quick, streamlined review process from submission to publication," Dr. Katz said.

The first issue of the Canadian Journal of Pain is set to publish in early 2017. To learn more about the journal, visit www.tandfonline.com/UCJP.
