1981 CONFERENCE OF THE SOCIETY FOR CINEMA STUDIES

21–24 April 1981

Host Institution
The College of Staten Island / CUNY

Conference Site
The Graduate School and University Center / CUNY

Conference Chair
Richard Barsam

Program Co-Chairs
Mirella Affron
Elliot Rubinstein

The 1981 Conference of the Society for Cinema Studies is organized, for the most part, under three general themes, and to each of these is devoted one of the conference days:

New York: Industry, Icon, and Resources / 22 April

Narrative, (Non-)Narrative, and Narrativity / 23 April

Film/Music/Sound / 24 April

This program lists all scheduled conference events. Please note that in most instances several events are scheduled at the same time. Any program changes will be posted on the bulletin board located at the 42nd street entrance. The schedule of films to be shown is printed at the end of this program. Abstracts of papers to be presented are printed in a separate booklet.

A. WORKSHOP ON CINEMA SOUND

Moderator: Dennis M. Turner, Queens College / CUNY

The workshop will center on two essays: Mary Ann Doane, "The Voice in the Cinema: The Articulation of Body and Space," and David Bordwell, "The Musical Analogy," Yale French Studies, 60. Through the courtesy of the editors of Yale French Studies, copies of these essays have been sent to those who pre-registered for the workshop. Enrollment is limited to those persons.

B. TOUR OF THE ASTORIA MOTION PICTURE AND TELEVISION CENTER

Host: Richard Koszarski, Director, Historical Program, Astoria Motion Picture and Television Center

Departure Point: Auditorium Foyer, 2:30 p.m. sharp.

The Astoria Motion Picture and Television Center was established in 1977 to operate the Astoria Studios as a major production facility and to undertake a wide range of cultural and educational programs.

The Studio was opened in 1920 as the East Coast production center of Famous Players-Lasky, later known as Paramount. Between 1920 and 1941, it was the home of Rudolph Valentino, Gloria Swanson, Paul Robeson, the Marx Brothers, W. C. Fields, and others, who with directors like Rouben Mamoulian and George Cukor, created a special "New York" style of movie, closer to Broadway than to Hollywood.

From 1940 to 1970, the United States Army operated the facility. As the Army Pictorial Center, it was the world's busiest studio, producing thousands of training and informational films, as well as world-wide radio and television programming.

Located just fifteen minutes by subway from midtown Manhattan, Astoria is the largest studio production facility in the East. It contains five sound stages — including the fourth largest in the country — and all ancillary facilities for full film and television production. The reactivation of Astoria has provided major impetus to the resurgence of production in New York City, and Astoria's stages have been the scene of much of this recent production activity.

Moderators: Jonas Mekas and Robert Hailer, Anthology Film Archives

Location: Anthology Film Archives, 80 Wooster Street. Subway directions: Take downtown Lexington Avenue IRT local train from Grand Central to Spring Street; walk west five blocks to Wooster Street.

Anthology Film Archives, a major New York resource for films — especially those of the avant-garde — will present a program featuring 35mm prints of early films by Alexander Hammid, Czechoslovakian-born director. The program includes Aimless Walk (1930), Prague Castle (1932), and The Highway Sings (1937). In addition to his many other films, Hammid also collaborated with Maya Deren on Meshes of the Afternoon (1943), which will be shown at 4:30 p.m. on 23 April in the 3rd Floor Studio at the Graduate School and discussed in a paper presented as part of program no. 26. During this session at Anthology, there will be a discussion of the films shown, an exhibition of new publications, a tour of the facilities, and refreshments.

9. SCREENING OF "ANNA CHRISTIE" (1923)

Released shortly after the Broadway production of Eugene O'Neill's play, this first film version broadly adapted the dramatic text. Directed by John Griffith Wray. Produced by Thomas Ince. With Blanche Sweet, William Russell, George F. Marion (who repeated his role in the 1932 version with Greta Garbo). Note: "An Evening With Miss Blanche Sweet" tonight at 8:30 (program no. 12).

10. BUSINESS MEETING OF THE SOCIETY FOR CINEMA STUDIES

All SCS members are encouraged to attend this important meeting.

11. WELCOMING RECEPTION

The College of Staten Island, the host institution for this 1981 conference, invites all conference registrants to a reception.

DINNER BREAK

The Dining Commons and Bar are located on the 18th floor.

12. AN EVENING WITH MISS BLANCHE SWEET

Introduction: Stanley Kauffmann, The Graduate School and University Center / CUNY

Blanche Sweet became a film star in 1911 as one of the leading players in D. W. Griffith's Biograph films, which developed and refined film narrative. She became one of the most popular and accomplished actresses of the 1920's in pictures such as Anna Christie and Tess of the D'Urbervilles.
Charles Silver of the Department of Film of the Museum of Modern Art will interview Miss Sweet on her work with Griffith and Thomas Ince and on other aspects of her career. Films to be shown include The Painted Lady, excerpts from Judith of Bethulia and other Biographs, and scenes from Anna Christie.

Admission by ticket only. Included in materials issued to conference registrants will be a ticket for this event. Additional tickets will be available for guests on a first-come, first-served basis up to the seating capacity of the auditorium.
